"Thou say'st my lines are hard; And I the truth will tell; They are both hard and mar'd, If thou not read'st them well."

We haven't figured out yet whether Miss Frances Porter, of Havana, needs a chaperone or a press agent.

We observe that by means of a wonderful new mechanical invention combining the genius of Morse and Mergenthaler news may be set directly into type by dummies.

The dyes of the country, it seems, are about to form an organization of the elite with a view to making prohibition respectable.

Advocates of gold lace and two-pound epaulettes win a smashing victory on the full-dress front, and by the time the Army and Navy reception rolls around we shall expect to see the East Room glittering with the splendor of a militia General in The Milk White Flag—brass buttons have come back in military circles. "When I first put this uniform on, I said as I looked in the glass, 'It's one to a million. That any civilian My figure and form will surpass. Gold lace has a charm for the fair, And I've plenty of that and to spare. While a lover's professions, When uttered in Hessians, Are eloquent everywhere.'"

Will Wood's denunciation of the one-half of one per cent grape juice law for the alleged benefit of underpaid Government clerks strikingly illustrates the slipshod methods of Congress, less than a quorum of men doing all the work in the House, and the membership running in from their remote offices a quarter of a mile away when called in by a bell, to cast their votes for a measure as to the worth and meaning of which they are as dumbly ignorant as a Hottentot summoned from the jungles of Africa. And now it is proposed that a committee of the Seventeenth Congress shall hold hearings and prepare a tariff bill to be rubber-stamped by the Seventy-first, a travesty on sane law-making that illuminates the same law in vogue on the Hill since the Soviet succeeded the Czar.

The gentlemen of the House who waxed eloquent over the prohibition issue yesterday don't seem to have learned that that issue was settled for all time in the recent election.

The flu cases in Los Angeles now total 2,821. As Hiram Johnson would say, some tourist from Arizona must have gone to that town.

At the next White House reception the perplexed society reporter won't know whether to base her scoop on the General's uniform or his wife's gown.

There seems to be a splendid opening just now for a good will tour in Colombia.

"Baa, baa, black sheep, have you any wool? Yes sir, yes sir, three bags full." The shearing season opens in Wall Street.

Things have come to a sad pass in Latin-America when they refer to a revolution as a strike. Is the spirit of Bolivar dead?

Mr. LaGuardia claims that it would take 150,000 agents to enforce prohibition and another 150,000 to watch 'em, but he must admit it helps to solve the unemployment problem.

Judging by the unfavorable response of so-called Southern leaders to a recent get-together suggestion, Johnny Raskob isn't making much of a hit by trying to apply Republican psychology to a Democratic reaction. When it comes to getting bolting sheep back in the flock, Mother Goose, as Carter Glass well knows, has the inside dope—"Leave them alone, and they'll come home, Wagging their tails behind them."

Ohio State University tests a device for registering applause, but we doubt if it will prove any more effective than the blue pencil of a Congressman editing his own speech.

When trains from New York for the South cross the Potomac by the Wakefield Bridge 60 miles away Washington may not be so enthusiastic about being left off the main line.

Twelve-year-old Iowa boy wins $9,000 at the Chicago Live Stock Show. We thought that the prize bull was produced by the Farm Bloc.

VESTRIS COURT EXPERTS HOLD CAREY FAILED

U. S. and British Advisors Say S O S Call Went 6 Hours Too Late.

CREW NOT PROPERLY LED, ASSERTS JESSUP

Chief Engineer Is Attacked; U. S. Captain Urges Drastic Changes in Ships.

New York, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—The cause of the hidden leaks that sank the liner Vestris remains a mystery of the sea today, but in official reports of British and American naval observers at the Federal inquiry into the disaster there came more criticism of the late Capt. William Carey and his crew for their conduct in the crisis.

Only speculative causes for the disaster were contained in the official reports of Capt. Henry McConkey, British adviser, and Capt. E. P. Jessup, American adviser to United States Commissioner O'Neill, who has been hearing testimony on the disaster since the week of November 11, when the vessel foundered off the Virginia Capes with a loss of more than 100 lives.

Commissioner O'Neill took the reports under consideration, as Federal Attorney Tuttle called before the commission yesterday J. L. Crane, supervising inspector of the United States Steamboat Inspection Service, which examined and passed the Vestris as seaworthy three days before she sailed on her last voyage. The finding of the commissioner is the next step expected in the investigation.

Should Have Called Aid. Both Capt. McConkey and Capt. Jessup agreed that Capt. Carey should have called for help six hours before he sent his S O S on the morning of November 12. Both agreed that one contributing cause of the disaster was the pumping out of the starboard tanks, which reduced the stability of the ship, and both severely criticized the lack of organization in the loading and lowering of lifeboats, two of which carried all the children and many of the women down with the vessel.

While Capt. McConkey, however, said testimony indicated the Vestris was seaworthy at the start of the voyage, Capt. Jessup declared: "Any vessel unable to stand a storm for 18 hours is not fit to send to sea."

The Vestris ran into rough weather Sunday night and sank early Monday afternoon.

"I don't believe that all seafaring history holds such an incident," Capt. Jessup said. "The crew seems to have been competent if led, but they were not led. The passengers were the most tractable that could have gone to sea."

The testimony inevitably points to the incompetence of the executive officers of the vessel, he said, adding that the master and the chief officer must be "men of initiative, judgment and what the experts call a situation of this kind."

The captain absolved F. W. Johnson, chief officer of the vessel, but bitterly denounced J. A. Adams, chief engineer, for attempting to fight the rushing water with inadequate pumps.

While Capt. McConkey made no suggestions in his report, Capt. Jessup recommended, among other things: That all ocean-going vessels carry wireless.

That all sea connections be located where they may be inspected via. That the method of testing lifeboats for water-tightness be inaugurated by the Steamboat Inspection Service.

That life-belts be changed in design so as to keep an exhausted person's head and shoulders above the water.

That executive ability be considered in the examination of officers.

Wood Urges Repeal Of Welch Salary Law

Congress Plan to Help Poorly Paid Ignored, He Tells House.

Repeal of the Welch pay-raising act was advocated in the House yesterday by Representative Will R. Wood (Rep.) of Indiana, who described the measure as a "monstrosity."

Wood said that the Welch act was "absolutely impracticable" and has failed to carry out the wishes of Congress in that it failed to materially help the poorly paid employees in the government service.

"The best thing that could happen in the interest of good government and in the interest of maintaining the morale of the employees of the United States," Wood declared, "would be to repeal this act."

In the debate that followed the interpretation placed on the Welch act by Comptroller General McCarl was criticized, and it was declared that the morale of the government workers had been badly shaken as a result of that interpretation.

The debate broke out while the House was considering the Treasury Department-Post Office appropriation bill, which carries increases caused by the Welch act.

"Right here, gentlemen," said Wood, who was discussing the bill, "I wish to say that the so-called Welch act is a monstrosity, absolutely impracticable, and has failed entirely to carry out the purposes for which this Congress believed it to be enacted."

"As a matter of fact," interjected Representative O'Connell (Democrat), of New York, "did it not increase the salaries of the employees of the Government?"

"It did," said Wood, "but it did not increase the salaries of the employees of the Government."

STOCK MARKET SLUMPS UNDER RUSH TO SELL

Rise of Call Money Is Signal for Drastic Dash to Unload.

PRICES DECLINE FROM $5 TO $20 A SHARE

Street Knows Why, but Wonders Who Sent Cash Rates Up to 12 Per Cent.

New York, Dec. 6 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—In the most drastic decline in six months the stock market today slumped from its record high marks and moved downward, dragging with it thousands of small investors who were riding along to extra fat Christmas stockings on the crest of the bull market. It was an orderly but decisive rout.

Prices of more than 100 stocks dropped from $5 to $20 a share as selling orders from all over the country poured on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange. Twenty leading industrials dropped an average of $9.45 a share. Twenty representative rail securities fell $4.38 a share. The day's trading was 5,400,200 shares, and so great was the tide of selling at the close of the day that the ticker did not stop until 3:58 o'clock, 58 minutes late.

Call Money Rise Decisive. The immediate cause in the turn in the tide which forced such stocks as United States Steel to drop 6 1/2 points, General Electric 11 points and Montgomery Ward 2 1/2 points was a rise in call money from 9 to 12 per cent, the highest mark since July 2.

Call money, the food on which the stock market thrives, started at 9 per cent. Financial tickers reported money plentiful and that the rate might go down during the day. Shortly after noon, however, call money advanced to 10 per cent. Shortly before 2 o'clock it was 11, and during the last hour of trading it rose to 12 per cent.

Who raised the money rates? That was what Wall Street wanted to know—who and what? The "what" was explained by such factors as increased financial requirements as those financial institutions got their "in-fund" in shape for their report to the Comptroller of the Treasury; Thanksgiving currency demands which took millions out of banks to pay for the holiday; payment of bills during the first ten days of the month; preparation by corporations of huge dividend and interest payments the first of the year and "earmarking" of gold from various banks by the Federal Reserve Bank.

"Who" Hard to Answer. But the "who" was a different question less easily answered. The gossip in various brokerage houses was that a group of "big" bankers had put their heads together and decided that the market needed a "corrective reaction" and so withdrew their funds from the money market.

Who the bankers were was any man's guess. Another story was that the head of one of New York's largest banks while issuing optimistic statements that the bull market had only started, quietly sold large blocks of stock and smiled to himself today as the break came. But Wall Street is prolific of stories.

The market opened irregularly. Some stocks advanced, some high among them Burroughs Adding Machine and A. M. Byers, which reached 200 and 205, respectively. Then call money went up 1 per cent and the wave of selling began, to increase in volume until just before closing time, when it reached the proportions of a tidal wave.

All Sections Affected. Stop loss orders swelled the beginning of the selling wave as call money advanced. All stocks, high-priced, low-priced and medium were caught in the sweep of the downward movement. As the selling got under way in volume the governor of the Federal Reserve Bank, in Richmond, Va., issued a statement in which he emphasized the "dangerous condition" of the market and co. demned the practice of large corporations in using "their surplus funds in call loans."

Eight years ago, call money went up to 14 per cent. A few months earlier, in February, 1920, the rate went to 20 per cent, while November 12, 1919, call money was 30 per cent.

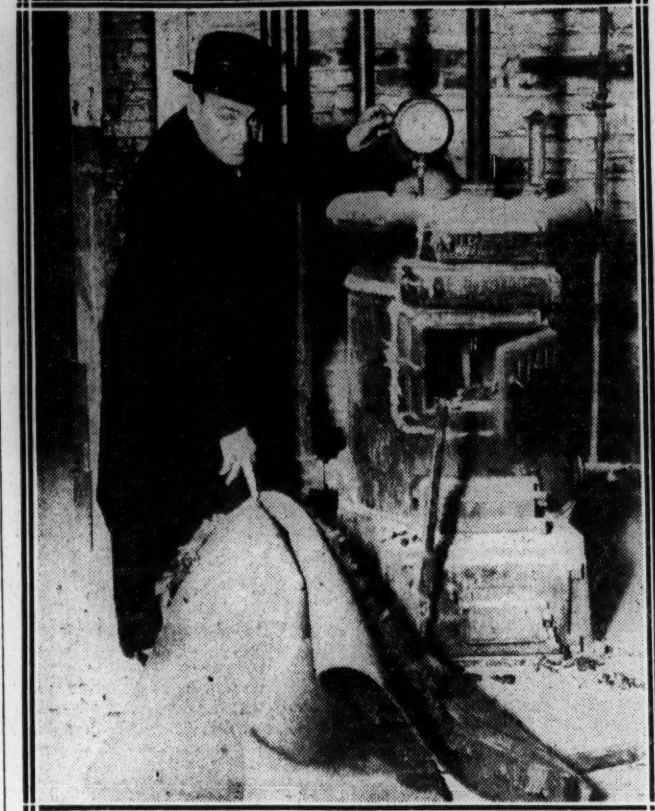

Then oldsters in the "street" laughed at some of the youngsters who remarked that money was tight. The former could remember occasions when call money was as high as 200 per cent, but that was before the days of the Federal Reserve system.

Business Loans Huger. The extent to which corporations are lending in the call money market was shown in this week's statement of broker's loans as reported to the Federal reserve system. Of the total of $5,394,500,000, corporations were lending $2,285,280,000, a decrease of $1,724,000 from the previous week but an increase of $1,309,151,000 for the same week of 1927.

The first of the year and the succeeding days, the large corporations of the country will be called upon to pay more than $2,000,000,000 in interest and dividends. Consequently, many of them have been disposing of their security holdings to build up an imposing cash surplus for dividend purposes. Attracted by the high money rate, millions of dollars were cabled from Europe today to meet the demands of the market tomorrow. Indications of the inflow of foreign funds in the last few days are shown in the decline of the pound sterling and the Canadian dollar, both of which have now reached the gold export point where it would be cheaper for London and Montreal to ship gold to New York instead of buying exchange here.

Two Women Burned; Veteran Saves Them

Mother and Daughter Are Hurt After Apron Catches Fire.

Mrs. Anna Burton, 62 years old, and Mrs. Ruth Birchett, 35 years old, her daughter, both of 3720 Thirteenth street northwest, were seriously burned last night when Mrs. Burton's clothing caught fire from a furnace she was tending, and her daughter rushed to her assistance.

The lives of both women were saved by Arthur G. Knox, wounded World War veteran, of Lake Placid, New York. Knox, who was visiting in the home, caught up a rug from the floor and threw it around the women, extinguishing the flames.

Both were taken to Walter Reed Hospital and given first-aid treatment, and later removed to Garfield Hospital. Mrs. Burton was suffering from severe burns on the body and Mrs. Birchett's hands and arms were terribly burned, the fingers being seared to the bone.

Several people were sitting in the living room of the home talking and listening to a radio. Mrs. Burton's husband had retired and she went to the basement to bank the fire for the night. As she was shaking the grate, a number of live coals fell onto her apron, which immediately became ignited. Evidently the glasses which she was wearing became covered with ashes, because she walked 8 or 10 feet to the basement stairs and removed them. Then she discovered that her clothing was ablaze, and she began screaming.

Her cries were muffled by the sound of the radio upstairs, and it was some time before she was heard. As soon as her screams reached her daughter, Mrs. Birchett rushed down to the basement and frantically tried to extinguish the flames with her bare hands. Her clothing also caught fire. Knox rushed to their assistance.

The two women were taken to Walter Reed Hospital in the patrol of the Thirteenth Precinct. At the hospital their condition was said to be unimproved.

Knox is an automobile salesman and is visiting A. C. Haight, 5915 Georgia avenue. He was a member of the famous First Division during the World War and was wounded by a wound in the right leg.

Submarine V-4 Makes New Record in Diving

Portsmouth, N. H., Dec. 6 (U.P.).—The V-4, the largest submarine in the United States Navy, today established a new diving record by remaining for 20 minutes on the ocean floor of the Isle of Shoals test course at a depth of 318 feet.

Printers' Society Treasurer Pays After Failure of Bank

George A. Dooley, Aged Officer of Government Printing Office Organization, Reports Paying Interest From Retirement Allotment for 5 Years.

In reporting yesterday to the board of directors of the Job-Room Immediate Relief Society of the Government Printing Office, that approximately $5,000 of the funds of the society he invested with an Ohio banking company had been lost with the failure of the company, George A. Dooley, aged secretary-treasurer of the society, and retired employee of the printing office, unfolded a tale of self-imposed financial sacrifice that he had endured since the failure five years ago.

The approximately 1,400 members of the society, all employed at the Government Printing Office, will share equally the loss, it was learned last night. Although Mrs. L. B. Clark, wife of the president of the board of directors, would not disturb her husband last night for the purpose of explanation, it was learned no action is contemplated against Dooley, who lives at 327 Seventh street northeast.

During the last five years, since the failure of the R. L. Hollings Banking Co. of Columbus, Ohio, and the subsequent legal action against its president and other officials, Dooley has been paying interest on the amount invested at the rate of 7 per cent out of his retirement allotment, he said. Unable to continue financing the investment out of the small annual retirement fund he receives, Dooley yesterday decided to make a report to the officials of the society.

He reported that he placed the fund with the Ohio company because he believed he would be able to get the fund returned through the receivers in which funds of the defunct company was placed.

KING IMPROVES STEADILY; LESS ANXIETY FELT

Fever Drops and Infection Is More Localized, Say Doctors.

STRAIN UPON HEART STILL TO BE FEARED

Queen and Princess Mary in More Cheerful Mood as Royal Patient Gains.

London, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—King George's condition continued to show improvement tonight.

The localization of the infection at the base of his right lung was more defined, according to an official bulletin signed by four physicians. Progress of the fight to restrict spread of the infection was considered the best feature of today's rather more cheerful reports. The evening bulletin said:

"The king's general condition remains the same as that reported in this morning's bulletin. Localization of the infection at the base of the right side of his chest is rather more defined, which conforms to the progress of the illness in the last two days."

"STANLEY HEWITT. 'E. FARQUHAR BUZZARD. 'HUNFREY ROLLESTON. 'DAWKIN OF PENN. Night Begins Well.

A spokesman at Buckingham Palace informed the United Press at 1 a. m. (Friday), that "the king is most comfortable and everything apparently is favorable."

There was a general atmosphere of hopefulness at Buckingham Palace and in the crowd which waited outside the gates for news of the king's condition. A quiet day and the reassuring bulletins had lessened the anxiety of the entire city.

An authorized analysis of the king's illness published in the British medical journal Lancet today revealed, however, that there is still cause for concern despite the tone of the bulletins. The analysis was considered the most authentic study of the case published so far.

The article points out that the long illness had caused the king much pain and emphasized the severity of the strain to which the king's constitution has been subjected.

Prince Nearer Egypt. Meanwhile, the Prince of Wales continued his dash for London on H. M. S. Enterprise, which is due at Suez late tomorrow. He will then board a train for Alexandria, where the warship Frobenius will be waiting to carry him to Brindisi, Italy, for the onward trip to Calais, France. A destroyer will carry him across the channel to Dover. Thence he will go by special train to London.

The Duke of Gloucester had passed, Dear, in South Africa, en route to Cape Town, where he will catch tomorrow's mail boat for home, press dispatches said.

The royal family regarded this morning's bulletin as reassuring and Queen Mary was unusually cheerful as she left the palace at 3 p. m. to take her daily motor ride. She bowed and smiled to the crowd at the gates as men doffed their hats and women bowed. Princess Mary accompanied her. The morning bulletin said:

"The king passed a fair night. His temperature this morning was lower. His general condition is slowly improving and the infective process, which remains severe, is becoming more localized."

"STANLEY HEWITT. 'DAWKIN OF PENN. King Remains Cheerful.

It was stated on reliable authority late today that the king had passed a good day and "his condition certainly was not worse than Tuesday night." The king was cheerful, it was said.

Lord Dawson joined Sir Stanley Hewitt at the palace early in the morning and they held a consultation before the morning bulletin was issued. Hewitt had remained at the palace all night.

Lord Dawson called again in the afternoon.

Princess Mary went shopping in the forenoon and returned to the palace for lunch. It was said officially that the now hopes to be able to fulfill engagements at Northampton Saturday.

The engagements had been canceled temporarily.

The royal family, however, will not pass Christmas at Sandringham. The queen canceled plans for a small family party, and for the first time in many years the king and queen will not visit there during the holidays.

The Evening News said that the king's digestion had been weak for some years and he had been forced to be careful with his diet.

"Also," the newspaper stated, "it is pretty certain that he never quite overcame the shock to his system suffered when his charger reared and fell on him in France."

The accident, in which the king was seriously hurt, occurred October 28, 1915, while his majesty was reviewing troops at the front. The king was carried 10 miles before proper medical attention could be found, and he suffered intensely.

The crowd around the palace gates was more than 2,000 again today and expressions of "Good!" and "That's better!" greeted the posting of the morning and evening bulletins. One bedraggled old cockney was overheard to say to the large crowd of worried spectators:

"If the king 'ad 'is way, 'e'd say: 'You carry on and don't make all this fuss about me.'"

More Aeronautics Research Is Asked

Fog Big Problem, Says Report of National Advisory Committee.

Continuance of experimentation and research in the field of fundamental flight problems is recommended in the annual report of the national advisory committee for aeronautics made public yesterday on its submission to Congress.

The report declares that "the greatest stimulation to the development of aeronautics will come from the education of the public by the private use of airplanes and by the safe operation of commercial air lines. These will come with the solution of the serious and difficult problems of navigating and landing in fog," it says.

"The development of instruments which will indicate the true position of the aircraft when flying without the assistance of ground vision, and the development of adequate communication systems are problems now pressing for solution in order that air transport services may be operated with assurance of safety and reliability."

Polish Minister to U. S. Asks to Be Sent Home

Jan Ciechanowski, Polish Minister to the United States for the last three years, has requested his government to relieve him from his present post in the early spring of next year, it was learned authoritatively last night.

Family affairs relating to the settlement of the estate left to the minister by his late father necessitate his presence in Europe for some time.

Minister Ciechanowski assumed his post in Washington in November of 1925, and has taken an active interest in the promotion of stronger commercial relations between his country and the United States.

BOY'S TITLE STEER BRINGS $7 A POUND

Animal Is Crowned Champion at International Livestock Exposition.

ANOTHER LAD IS WINNER

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Two young farm boys from the same county in Iowa have faunted tradition and placed their names indelibly upon the annals of the International Livestock Exposition alongside State universities and veteran cattle raisers.

These lads, symbolical of modern youth in this epoch-making stock show, are Clarence Goecke, 12, of State Center, and Keith Collins, 15, of Liscoomb, both of Marshall County, Iowa, who shared the premier honors of the exposition in the two chief classes of competition against the Nation's best. It was the first time youngsters have won these highest prizes.

Young Goecke made the old-timers sick and wonder as his grand champion steer of the show went of the auction block today for more than $8,000, at $7 per pound, almost doubling the previous high price for king of the steers. Other prize money brought his total to more than $8,000.

Winner in Carcass Class.

Rivaling the 12-year-old champion was Collins, in the carcass class, whose steer triumphed over all others to first prize in its class, one representing the pinnacle of success in steers on the hoof and the other the apex of animals slaughtered.

Veteran exhibitors at the annual exposition considered it remarkable not only that two lads should be elevated to the topmost honors of the exposition, but also that both should be 4H Club boys from the same county, neighbors.

Collins' champion steer carcass is yet to be sold, but it too likely will yield a record price.

Each boy also has two more steers to be disposed of and stockmen are looking forward to additional surprises when these animals go on the market.

Winner Remains Unmoved.

The auction of the champion steer established almost undreamed-of records when the J. C. Penney Co., of New York, backed by a man who himself had risen from an impecunious farm lad, bid more than $8,000 for the beast. Through it all, young Goecke, who epitomized American farm youth and its accomplishments in all phases of agriculture through boys and girls club work, was unmoved. He had paid only $55 for his steer, purchasing it last year from his father.

Clarence said he would share his modest fortune with his dad and sister, Emma, 17, who had helped him exhibit the champion. He intends to use part of his winnings to finance the purchase of a herd and to stow the rest for his future.

Friend Shot in Jaw By Would-Be Suicide

Lexington, Ky., Dec. 6 (N.Y.W.S.).—Two men, who received bullet wounds from an automatic pistol yesterday, gave the same version of the affair today—that Ray Donahue, 18, was accidentally shot in the jaw when Gordon H. Smith, 24, attempted to commit suicide.

Smith shot himself over the heart, but a rib turned the bullet and he will recover. Another shot missed him and accidentally struck Donahue.

CHAMPION STEER THAT WON $9,000 FOR BOY

Dick, Hereford yearling adjudged the grand champion steer at the International Livestock exposition at Chicago, and Clarence Goecke, the boy who raised him.

MISS PORTER SAILS FROM CUBA IN YACHT

Skipper Promises to Land Former Showgirl at American Port.

Havana, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—The yacht Malvern, belonging to C. P. Whitehead, of Atlanta, Ga., put to sea late today presumably headed for Palm Beach, Fla. Aboard it as its sole passenger was Miss Frances Porter, New York showgirl, erstwhile yacht companion of Whitehead.

Clearance papers, given the Malvern skipper only after he had guaranteed to land Miss Porter on American territory, were presented at the port captain's office in late afternoon, the boat shortly afterward clearing the harbor.

The Malvern's departure closed a phase of an affair which attracted considerable attention here in which court charges were brought against Miss Porter by Whitehead, accusing the former Broadway dancer of having stupors in him and of general mistreatment. When the charges were preferred last Wednesday, the actress went aboard the boat and refused to leave it. Meanwhile she sent notes to the wealthy young Atlanta beseeching reconciliation. There were other notes of general defiance to all to take her ashore.

In an interview shortly before the departure of the Malvern Miss Porter said she would "remain in Florida just long enough to catch a train to Washington, where I shall place the entire affair in the hands of the proper authorities."

The attorney for Whitehead in Havana, Dr. Marion Lazo, said there would be a statement from his client tomorrow and that Whitehead wished to be "left alone and in peace." He was said to be ill at a local hotel.

Argentine Envoy Relieved of Post

Friction Over Tariff and Hoover Held Reasons for Resignation.

Buenos Aires, Dec. 6 (United Press).—A presidential decree issued today relieved Dr. Manuel E. Malbran of his position as Argentine Ambassador to Washington. Dr. Malbran arrived here today and conferred with the foreign minister.

Reports of the impending resignation of Dr. Manuel E. Malbran as Argentine Ambassador to the United States have been current in Washington since the envoy returned to Buenos Aires recently because of "personal reasons." It is known that one of the motives which induced Ambassador Malbran to leave the Capital at that time was his dissatisfaction with the failure of his government to negotiate through its Washington Embassy plans for President-elect Hoover's South American visit.

Another cause for Ambassador Malbran's reported determination to resign was seen here in the friction between the Argentine and United States government on the subject of tariff raises on the importation of corn and flax. The feeling in Latin-American diplomatic circles here had been that unless Ambassador Malbran was able to adjust these questions with President-elect Hoover's South American visit, Argentine envoy to this country.

American to Wed Princess d'Orleans

Parents, King George's Cousins, Not to Oppose Match With W. F. Kingsland.

London, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Princess Maria Louise d'Orleans, who is living in a quiet place in Sussex, said tonight that her parents, the Duke and Duchess of Vendome, cousins of King George, would not oppose her marriage to Walter F. Kingsland, of New York. Their engagement was announced today.

The princess said she had been in regular communication with her mother, who is with her ill father in Switzerland. Nothing has been decided definitely about the arrangements for the wedding, she said, but she indicated it might take place in Sussex, about December 12, and probably would be a quiet affair.

The question of a dispensation from the Pope to permit her marriage outside her religion had been considered, she said, and added that her father's illness probably would prevent either of her parents from attending the ceremony.

REAL LIQUOR SEIZED IN RAID POLICE SAY

High Grade Stock Captured as Two Men Remove It From House to Auto.

Believing that they have uncovered one of the principal sources of the illicit high grade liquor trade in the National Capital, detectives of Central Headquarters yesterday—by a stroke of luck—confiscated a large stock of assorted liquors which they believe probably have been accommodating a prosperous clientele of this city.

The liquor was taken at a residence near Tenth and O streets northwest, as it was being removed to an automobile following an alleged hi-jacking of the stock from Milton Edward Aul, 31 years old, of 1439 Whittier street northwest, early yesterday evening.

According to the police thirteen cases of champagne, four cases of Vermont two gallon jugs of wine, 17 cases of alleged whisky and one case of alleged Scotch whisky were confiscated as it was being transferred from the O street house to the automobile.

Lieut. Edward J. Kelly, Detective Sergeant, Thomas Sweeney Joseph Whittier, and Paul Jones took possession of the liquor as Carroll Chase Sturges, of Baltimore, Md., is said to have been transferring it to the automobile.

Sturges and Aul were locked up at the First Precinct station and charged with illegal possession and transportation, at 1418 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, in the care of Charles Williams, custodian.

Lieut. Kelly and other members of the raiding squad say that the raid was prompted by a report made to police headquarters that a quantity of liquor had been stolen from Aul's Whittier street home. The report was made by a friend of Aul, whose name the police refused to divulge, but who told them that the liquor could be recovered in a garage at the rear of a residence in the vicinity of Tenth and O streets northwest.

Upon investigating the police found Aul and Sturges busily engaged in removing the stock.

At the British Embassy last night it was stated in regard to the reported intention of Sir Esme Howard to resign, that "the ambassador doesn't know anything about it."

Detroit Man, Kidnaped Nov. 27, Returns Home

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Police were notified today that Benjamin Jacob, Detroit bottle dealer, who was kidnaped from his office here November 27 by three men, returned home last night.

The information was given by Samuel Jacob, brother of the kidnaped man, who declined to disclose details. Samuel said his brother left the city a few hours after his return home and would be away for several days. The Jacob family denied any ransom had been paid for Benjamin's release.

LABOR OF MEXICO IN BREAK WITH GIL

"Crom" Orders Members to Quit Federal or State Positions.

PRESIDENT DENOUNCED

Mexico City, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Resolutions ordering members of the "Crom"—Mexico's leading labor organization—employed by federal or state governments to retire from their posts at once were passed at the convention of the "Crom" here today. The action is regarded as marking a wide-open split between the labor organization and the government.

The resolutions also withdrew "Crom" delegates from participation in the Congress of Representatives of Workers and Employers, which is considering the projected labor legislation of Portes Gil, Mexico's provisional president.

It was decided, too, to hold further sessions of the "Crom" convention at the Teatro Tivoli del Eliseo instead of the Teatro Hidalgo, as heretofore, inasmuch as the Teatro Hidalgo is the property of the government.

Action Follows Message.

Today's actions followed upon a message sent by President Gil to the convention denying charges made in the course of its early sessions that members of the "Crom" were being persecuted in various parts of Mexico, and denying that he had been active against the organization while he was governor of the state of Tamaulipas, in which the City of Tampico is located, and where much of Mexico's oil industry is centered.

The chamber of deputies met tonight to consider the situation growing out of the split. While the meeting was in session a small crowd of manifestants gathered outside and shouted: "Down with Morones." He is president of Crom convention.

Representatives of the majority bloc spoke at the session, assuring President Portes Gil of the support of the majority faction, and criticizing the attitude of the Crom.

Contributing to the ill feeling against Gil in the labor ranks was his action today in denying the request of the organization to interfere with production of a play at a local theater which offered an alleged criticism of the labor union.

In the rejection of this request President Gil reiterated a statement made in his inaugural address, declaring that the right to criticize always will be fully respected and protected by his administration.

Members Jailed, Charge.

In his message to the "Crom" he declares he cherished a friendly feeling toward it as well as toward all workers of the nation.

In the debate following upon receipt of his message speakers severely criticized the provisional president, asserting he had failed to understand the "Crom," and reiterating charges that members of the organization were

DRYS MAPPING OUT NEW ORGANIZATION

Church and Other Important
Bodies to Discuss Plans
Here Next Week.

"OFFENSIVENESS" TO GO

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

A Nation-wide, nonpartisan dry organization, the Antisoon League, is mapping out a new organization of drys here next week. There are to be meetings of the National Legislative Conference, the National Temperance Council and not by any means the least the continuation committee of the conference of 31 church and temperance organizations which said as early as last February that Gov. Smith should not pass.

The meetings are separate and merely coincidental. They come here as a routine part of their work. But out of them, embracing interlocking memberships as they do, is expected to come expression at least of the movement for what might be termed a "super" dry organization, modeled along the lines of the new Association Against the Prohibition Amendment—that is, with men and women prominent in the Nation's business and professional life and who have not been prominently identified with the dry cause herebefore.

In one respect, as the drys put it themselves, it would be a step toward eliminating the "offensiveness" of the dry cause or, in other words, the professional reformer.

It would not be aimed directly at the displacement of the Antisoon League, but necessarily would work toward its absorption. And because of this it would hardly meet with the warm encouragement of that organization, to say the least.

New Elements Sought.

Of course, the new organization, should it develop, would necessarily have its mainpring in those groups that have heretofore been actively identified with the dry movement, but the purpose would be to place the new element out in front as soon as it could be acquired—men such as Henry Ford and Thomas A. Edison.

The drys have been considerably impressed by the imposing composition of the new wet organization with its Du Ponts, Atterburys, Wadsworths and the like. Quite an influential part of the citizenry is reflected in the new wet aggregation, in fact, it would probably have been doing things by now had not Gov. Smith taken its thunder. The governor presented such a problem to its high clientele by agreeing that prohibition was the burning issue of the day, that the organization kept rather quiet during the campaign, but undoubtedly it expects to renew its activities as soon as it can get some statistical arguments out of the election result.

Anticipating that there are those among the drys who want an organization just as imposing. While it is difficult to say just where the sentiment for the new organization exists, it is probable that there is about as much in the W. C. T. U. as anywhere.

Victory Laid to Women.

Except that the two organizations are dry in purpose, the W. C. T. U. has never had much in common with the Antisoon League. That the women brought about prohibition is axiomatic, that the league then took over the administering of it is likewise accepted. The W. C. T. U. is the women's organization. It was the prevailing thought of its recent annual meeting in Boston that it should receive more credit for its accomplishment.

It is not constitutionally constructed, however, to enter the field of the Antisoon League. Whenever its opinion of contemplated legislation is asked it gives it.

It has Mrs. Lenna Lowe Yost, of Huntington, W. Va., established here for that purpose. But it does not seek to dictate appointments or to have anything to do with the enforcement. It has never laid itself open to the charge of "super" government that is frequently flung at the Antisoon League. Its attitude is that the prohibition amendment was adopted and that the Government should enforce it.

It has no advice now to offer President-elect Hoover, an attitude in contrast to that of other dry organizations. It is the desire to get away from the picture that the Antisoon League gives to the prohibition cause that is behind the movement for the new organization.

Whether it will take any definite form at next week's gathering remains to be seen.

Three Warnings Enough.

It might be a logical offspring of the so-called continuation committee of the conference representing 31 organizations. Last fall and winter this organization met at Atlantic City, Washington and Jacksonville, its main purpose apparently being to sit at one of these places, shout that neither Smith, Reed nor Ritchie would ever be elected President, then wait a month or so and sit

Rum Row Is Gone, Says Coast Guard

Better Smuggling Barrier Is Impossible With Present
Force, Says Report.

(Associated Press.)

The far-flung activities of the United States Coast Guard in protecting the coasts of the Nation, in aiding ships and persons in distress and patrolling ice-bound waters on watch for menacing icebergs in steamship lanes, were described yesterday in the annual report of the service.

During the fiscal year of 1928 the report said that the Coast Guard rescued 3,983 persons from peril, aided ships valued at $39,479,729 on which there were 17,383 persons and seized or reported for law violations 1,534 vessels. The work of the Coast Guard in preventing the smuggling of liquor into this country, the report declared, has been satisfactory, but with the resources in vessels and men now in command, it said it is impossible to do more. Rum row, it stated, has been entirely wiped out.

Farrell's Name Given Senate for Approval

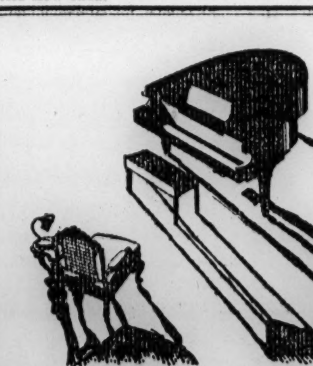

(Associated Press.)

The nomination of Patrick J. Farrell, of Vermont and the District of Columbia, to be a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission was sent to the Senate yesterday by President Coolidge. Farrell succeeds Commissioner John J. Esch. The nominations of Claude R. Porter, of Iowa, and Clyde B. Atchison, of Oregon, as members of the commission also were sent to the Senate. The last two are reappointments.

In another city and about the same time.

Specifically, it shouted this warning three times, which it now appears should have been taken as enough.

But after giving this warning it appointed its continuation committee, embracing the most outstanding dry workers in the country, to visit the Kansas City and Houston conventions and generally to carry on. There is nothing further now for it to carry on. Presumably it will disband. But it will be mighty hard for its members to go back to their individual organizations. It snatches too much of retrogression. It would be more ambitious to embrace the new idea.

HEARING TOMORROW ON NAMING OF WEST

Fight Looms Over Coolidge's
Nomination of Him as Interior Secretary.

WHITING BELIEVED SAFE

(Associated Press.)

For a second time the choice by President Coolidge of a member of his cabinet is going to come under close scrutiny, if not opposition, of the Senate.

Transmittal yesterday by the President of the nomination of Roy O. West, of Chicago, as Secretary of the Interior to the Senate for its confirmation brought immediate demands there for a hearing and a call for a special meeting of the public lands committee to consider the nomination tomorrow.

In calling the committee meeting, Chairman Nye, said it was "quite apparent that there will be a desire to have Mr. West before the committee to make a response to questions growing out of his appearance before the elections frauds committee in Chicago, where he testified to holding extensive stock in the Samuel Insull Utility interests."

Among those who indicated yesterday that they would like to question the Secretary were Senators Walsh (Democrat), Montana; Dill (Democrat), Washington; and Norris (Republican), Nebraska. Senator Walsh said he desired to ask Mr. West what steps he took to determine the legality of the Salt Creek Royalty Oil contract renewal to the Sinclair interests which recently was declared void by the Department of Justice.

President Coolidge obviously took some of the senators by surprise when he failed to send the nominations of Mr. West and Mr. Whiting for Secretary of Commerce to the Senate during the first two days of the session. The opinion was growing that he might avoid the threatened fight against West by withholding the nominations. The two cabinet members who were appointed during the recess to succeed Hubert Work as Interior Secretary, and Herbert Hoover, as Commerce Secretary, could have served until the close of the session of Congress without any Senate action. That period also will mark the termination of the Coolidge administration.

HOUSE HAS ANNUAL WET AND DRY CLASH

$250,000,000 and 150,000
Men Needed to Enforce Law
LaGuardia Asserts.

STATES' RIGHTS PLEADED

(Associated Press.)

With the opening of general debate on the $1,000,000,000 Treasury-Postoffice appropriation bill in the House yesterday, wets and drys seized the first opportunity of the short session to indulge in their annual battle over prohibition enforcement. The measure carries $13,500,000 for dry law enforcement.

Representative LaGuardia (Republican), New York, a wet, started the row by charging there was no desire on the part of the administration to enforce the prohibition laws in dry States, and if the drys really wanted to continue the "noble experiment" that beginning next July 1, to meet the situation in Detroit alone, and added that in the "so-called dry States" of Iowa, Kansas, North Carolina and Minnesota, hardly a cent was spent to enforce the law.

He pleaded for the right of each State, especially New York, to solve its own problem and attacked what he said was the "low" practice of agents of employing their wives as decoys to make arrests. He was interrupted only once, by Representative Celler (Democrat), New York, another wet, who declared the administration "wants to give the drys the law and the wets the liquor."

Representative Lozier (Democrat), of Missouri, a dry, and the only other speaker on the subject, declared that while he was for national prohibition, the Federal Government had not made an honest and sincere effort to enforce it. This explained the law's unpopularity, he said, adding that the States were doing all the enforcing.

Prohibition, Lozier declared, would not be an issue today if the Government had made an "honest and determined" effort to enforce it.

NEW MACHINE SETS TYPE BY TELEGRAPH

One Man in New York Soon
May Operate Linotypes in Thousand Cities.

HUMAN SPEED TREBLED

Rochester, N. Y., Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Frank E. Gannett, Rochester newspaper publisher, told 100 leaders of news industries here today that soon one man in New York may set the type in composing rooms of 1,000 American cities, doing it by telegraph.

"And," he said, "looking into the future, it is not difficult to visualize the time when one operator, sending by wireless, will be able to set type in any or every city in the country."

"Now, turn on the motors and I'll show you something you never saw before."

The guests looked at two typesetting machines which stood at one end of the room. A turn of an electric switch, and these machines began clicking rapidly. They stood alone, robots facing their audience, with no human assistance close by, setting type by wire through the medium of a new invention named the teletypesetter.

Fast Speed Possible.

"The possible speed of the automatic method," said Mr. Gannett, "is probably three times that of hand operation. And its accuracy is well-nigh perfect."

A man stepped to one of the typesetting machines, picked up some of the type lines it was setting, doing so in a manner to "jam" its operation and stop the machine.

Instantly, it seemed, the robot which was feeding a tape seven-eighths of an inch wide to operate the typesetting machine, also stopped running and the tape became motionless.

A red light flared at the top of the typesetting machine and glowed until the artificial "jam" was set right. Immediately the machine began automatically setting type again.

"You see," said Mr. Gannett, "we think they are fool-proof so far as trouble from stoppage is concerned."

He showed how the tape was punched at one side of the room, which, for the purposes of the demonstration, was named "New York," and the code of this punched tape carried across the room by wire with electrical impulses to a receiving table where another machine reproduced an exactly similar punched tape, and then transferred it through a third machine to operate the typesetting machines.

Many Questions Asked.

"Questions?" said Mr. Gannett. Instantly a flood burst forth, mixed with comment. "Can't we write our news directly in type and save time?" was one question.

Mr. Gannett answered that this is feasible, and that men learn quickly to read the code punches of the tape itself, as they would read ordinary print.

A factious questioner wanted to know whether Mr. Gannett might some time supply mechanical substitutes for reporters. The newspaper business, in transmitting directly into type fast and accurate market quotations was specially stressed.

Mr. Gannett said the teletypesetter may be attached to regular typesetting machines with an hour's work and the aid of two screws.

Applause Is Recorded
By University Device

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—A machine to record applause was tested at Ohio State University here tonight. The device, a product of the mechanics department of the university, shows the volume of applause given by an audience by means of a galvanometer that registers on a dial.

It was worked out by Prof. Perry W. Ott, head of the department of mechanics, and John W. Ward, assistant director of the engineering experiment station. It was given its first test at a debate tonight.

Man on Trial for Life
On Indictment of 1912

Paragould, Ark., Dec. 6 (A.P.).—John Reed, 48 years old, went on trial in Circuit Court today on a 16-year-old indictment, charging him with the murder of his wife.

Reed is alleged to have struck his wife in March, 1912, knocked her into a mud hole and held her in the water until she was drowned. Her body was found under the branches of a tree which had been felled. He was arrested on his brother's farm near Marshalltown, Iowa, last September.

KIDNAPED GAMBLER FAILS TO AID POLICE

Louisville Chief Declares Men
Who Abducted Ed Alvey
Are Sought There.

VICTIM WAS BLINDFOLDED

Louisville, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—The abduction of Ed Alvey, gambler, was planned by local men, in the opinion of Col. Roy W. Easley, chief of the Louisville Police Department, who said today that "regardless of whether Mr. Alvey cooperates with us in our investigation, every effort will be made to apprehend those responsible."

Fear because of widespread publicity and police activity today was believed to have caused the "gentleman kidnappers" to abandon their plot and release Alvey, 60 years old, a colorful figure of the racing world, after holding him in prison nearly 54 hours.

Alvey, none the worse for his long captivity, returned to his home shortly before 1 o'clock this morning, having been released without payment of ransom money. He had been kidnapped shortly after 6 o'clock Monday night while out for a walk in front of his home and was forced into an automobile by three unidentified men, one of whom covered him with a pistol.

Prisoner Was Blindfolded.

From the moment of his entry into the car until his release in a Louisville suburb about midnight identity of the abductors was carefully shielded from Alvey by bandages placed over his eyes.

Col. Easley understands that Alvey gave a word to the kidnappers that he would not aid the authorities in any way. Under Kentucky law kidnapping and holding for ransom is a felony punishable by death or life imprisonment.

By her failure to answer the telephone at her residence Monday night Mrs. Alvey probably saved her husband $30,000. The telephone at the Alvey home rang intermittently all Monday night, but Mrs. Alvey said she thought her husband was in bed and did not care to be disturbed so she did not answer it. Meantime an acquaintance of Alvey's was asked over the telephone if he would cash Alvey's check for $50,000. That was the only intimation of ransom made, so far as could be learned. Police held a theory that had she answered the telephone she might have paid the ransom and said nothing about it.

Pope Receives U. S. Sailors.

Rome, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Pope Pius today received 7 officers and 50 men attached to the U. S. Raleigh at a special audience. He delivered a short address expressing pleasure that they had come to see him and exhorting them to be brave Christians and brave seamen. He then imparted the apostolic benediction.

Third Week Essays Written On Wide Variety of Topics

Tips to Fourth Period Entrants in "Big News" Contest
Contained in Resume of Previously Submitted
Compositions; Fine Prizes Offered.

Students of the District of Columbia and nearby territory, writing for third week prizes in The Washington Post's "Big News" contest, had a wide variety of subjects which they considered "Big News" for the week of November 25 to December 1.

Among the topics on which essays were written were Representative Britton's naval parley, King George's illness, Herbert Hoover's South American trip, Canada's action in the border rum war, The Washington Post's appeal for "A Brighter Community Christmas," the air show, the Rothstein clean-up, the fear for Col. Lindbergh, the speed limit for fire trucks in Washington and the Balkan situation.

While judges are picking the winners from the batch of essays submitted, these items are mentioned to help those who plan to compete in the fourth week of the contest which began Sunday, December 2, and closes Saturday, December 8. All essays for the fourth week prizes must be submitted by midnight Wednesday, December 12. The items mentioned above will give prospective entrants an idea of what others are choosing as subject matter for their compositions.

Essays must not be longer than 250 words, written on one side of the paper and must have attached the name, address and school connection of the writer.

First pick out the story on which you wish to write. Tell why you think it is the "Big News" of the week and then go on to explain its effect on the community, the Nation or the world, as the case may be.

Picking the biggest news item of the week is not necessary for the judges will consider the manner in which stories are presented as well as the choice of news. All those who submit essays in the weekly contest are eligible for the $5 prizes in two classes. One is for high school students; the other for grade or junior high school pupils. They are also eligible for the quarterly $20 prize which carries with it the privilege of a week's work on the staff of The Washington Post, with pay. The first quarter closes the week before Christmas and the winning student will put in his or her week at The Post during the Christmas holidays.

Daughter-in-Law Wins,
$12,500 for Alienation

Mrs. Reynolds charged Mrs. Vaughan threatened to disinherit Raymond Reynolds, her son by a former marriage, if he continued to live with his wife. The plaintiff claimed Mrs. Vaughan was wealthy. Mrs. Vaughan is a niece of the late Henry Dennison, wealthy retired farmer.

The Federal Court jury's verdict was read this morning when court convened.

Three Men Killed In Vapor Explosion

Two Others Reported Missing
After Blast Wrecks
Three Buildings.

New York, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—A vapor explosion at the Kill-All Disinfecting Co.'s plant on the upper East Side took the lives of at least three men and injured nine others today. In addition, two men reported missing, were sought by firemen and police who combed the ruins of the three one-story brick buildings wrecked by the blast.

The known dead were Harry Freeman, known also as Harry Goldberg, owner of the disinfecting company; Andrew Avadio, 77, and an unidentified workman.

The missing men were believed to have been working in a junk dealer's shop, one of the damaged buildings. The other structure was occupied by the Acme Furring Co.

Thomas Brophy, fire marshal, attributed the blast to vapor from alcohol and benzine used in making sewer disinfectant, set off by a spark.

Windows in the east 108th street neighborhood, a block from the East River, were shattered. The roof of the Kill-All building was hurled 60 feet.

DR. MALTBI'S REPORT.

The report on the traction merger agreement, prepared in behalf of the Senate District committee by Dr. Milo R. Maltbie, New York public utility expert, was submitted yesterday. The report expresses unqualified opposition to many phases of the agreement. Of principal importance is the fact that it does not recommend acceptance of the $50,000,000 valuation and rate base figure, on the ground that it is excessive. It would not be necessary, says the report, in order to bring about a merger under the plan proposed, "to value the property acquired by the new company. Companies are seldom merged or consolidated with valuations approved by State legislatures or Congress. Unification does not change the constitutional status of property."

Dr. Maltbie, however, is not opposed to merger. "No one denies," says the report, "that with a unified system service could be improved, the amount of property required adequately to serve the public reduced, the costs of operation curtailed, and vehicular traffic accelerated and convenience. The gain to the public would be equal and perhaps exceeded by the benefits that would accrue to the companies. The question considered in the report is not whether unification is desirable but whether the terms under which it is to be effected are fair and reasonable." Dr. Maltbie does not believe they are, and he points out carefully and in detail the defects he considers inherent in the merger agreement.

It is pointed out in the report that the Public Utilities Commission has general authority to fix valuations and that the merger agreement would abrogate that right for a period of at least ten years. This would be in direct conflict with the modern theory of regulation. Arguing against the inclusion of the $50,000,000 rate base figure, the report says: "If the companies or their stockholders are sure of their legal position, there is no need for concern merely because the two systems are brought under the control and management of one company. If, however, there is any doubt of the ability of the companies to obtain from the courts a valuation of $50,000,000 or more and to maintain it for ten years, the companies will be in a stronger position when Congress has approved the contract."

Under no circumstances can the report be said to close the door to the merger. Indeed, it indicates a course upon which consolidation can be effected. Let the companies agree to merge, without insisting upon a valuation provision, and trust to equitable regulation by the authorities, as individual companies have in the past.

THE AMERICAS LINKED BY AIR.

President-elect Hoover's idea of linking the countries of North and South America by a system of airways, which he expressed at the state dinner given in his honor at Lima, is far from being visionary. He suggested that a system of Pan-American airways could be quickly devised by representatives of each of the countries gathering about a council table. Whether or not that suggestion is heeded by the governments concerned, Mr. Hoover's prediction that "we would realize such a service within another twelve months" is even now in the process of fulfillment.

Plans are worked out for the Pan-American Airways, Inc., to begin next month operating planes over the 1,150-mile route, including Havana, San Juan, Haiti and Santo Domingo. Within a few months this company expects to open a 2,000-mile route between Merida, Mexico, and Panama City, for which airports will be provided in Mexico, Panama, Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Honduras, Guatemala and British Honduras. This same company recently began airplane service between Miami and Nassau, and for some time has operated between Florida and Havana.

Several other important airways which will ultimately link the United States with all its southern neighbors have been recently opened. The air-mail service of this country connects with the Mexican airways at Laredo. Daily service between Mexico City and Laredo began on October 1, this year, and daily service is now maintained between Mexico City and the midland center of Matamoros, as well as with Tampico. Planes fly triweekly between Vera Cruz and Merida.

Delivery of mail that has taken from 14 to 18 days will be accomplished within a few hours when the Guatemalan government establishes its proposed service between Guatemala City and Flores. Honduras is maintaining an air route between Tela and Tegucigalpa. The Central American countries are alive to the possibilities of aviation. Similar development is going forward in South America, where the great distances to be traveled between centers of population call for air transportation. This easy and rapid means of communicating with the countries of the Western Hemisphere should mean much to the United States. Trade will be stimulated, and demands for American-made planes will be increased. As Mr. Hoover says, "this revolution in communication and transportation" would tend to "destroy the distance between peoples and construct friendship between them."

The President-elect's statement, "I should be proud, indeed, if I might contribute to the furtherance of so great a development," coupled with his suggestion for a Pan-American aviation conference, leads to the belief that he may take steps toward development of international airways between the two Americas after his inauguration. At least he may be counted upon as a friend of the movement, and this fact will serve as a stimulant to those interested in postal and commercial air lines linking this country with South America.

CONGRESS SHOULD INVESTIGATE.

Two resolutions asking for investigations by the Senate into the sinking of the Vestris have been introduced. Senator Wagner, of New York, proposes that the Senate select five of its members for the work, and that $50,000 be appropriated from the contingent fund of the Senate to cover the expenses. Senator Jones, of Washington, urges appointment of a joint committee composed of three senators and three representatives to conduct an investigation and make recommendations for safety at sea.

Investigations have been made of the Vestris disaster by the United States district attorney of New York and by the Steamboat Inspection Service. These investigations did not bring out all the facts. Witnesses in some instances palpably withheld information. The public is not at all satisfied with the situation as it stands. In order to promote safety at sea it is desirable that Congress should have full information concerning the causes of the Vestris disaster.

Senator Wagner suggests that the proposed committee investigate the adequacy of the present legal standards of safety in ship construction, the efficiency of the Steamboat Inspection Service, the laws governing loss of life and property at sea, the laws and usages of salvage, and safety devices for sea craft. He would have the committee study the whole subject of safety on the sea, making reports to Congress and finally submitting a detailed report with recommendations for necessary legislation.

The Wagner resolution ought to be adopted.

MAKING RADIO CONFUSION.

While Radio Commissioner Caldwell on Tuesday was characterizing the radio equalization clause passed by the last session of Congress as a "lemon," Senator Dill, daddy of radio legislation, was introducing a further amendment to the law, limiting all broadcasting stations to 10,000 watts power except for restricted experimental purposes. If the equalization clause may be fairly characterized as a lemon, the power restriction clause must be characterized as a whole bunch of lemons.

What is the use of having a commission if it is to have no powers? "Since the commission will not protect the public," said Senator Dill in explanation of the new amendment, "Congress is the only body that can do so." If the commission is not protecting the public it is because Congress required it to enforce an ambiguous and unworkable law.

What is needed is not a mass of confusing laws tying the hands of the Radio Commission, but a law setting up a permanent radio commission with power to supervise and regulate radio in the public interest. Congress should not concern itself with the mechanics of such regulation, for they can be solved only by experts. Further restrictions tacked on to the existing law will only serve to complicate the situation.

CLEAN OUT CROOKED LAWYERS.

Sweeping changes in the statutes and rules of practice governing the ambulance-chasing evil in New York are advocated in the report of a special inquiry submitted to the Supreme Court of Brooklyn. At the same time comes the announcement from Philadelphia that three members of the bar have been found guilty of unethical conduct and forbidden to practice law in Pennsylvania. One report notes a growing evil; the other suggests a practical remedy.

Ambulance-chasing is one of the most despicable practices in which attorneys of this country have ever indulged. These jackleg lawyers obtain information of accidents from police headquarters or from information bureaus established for the purpose. They send chasers to the bedside of the injured person. The chasers often hold out false inducements to have their employers retained as counsel. If the injured person is not insured, the case is usually dropped. But where the insurance is large, physicians, professional insurance adjusters and others are often brought into the agreement, all of them taking large fees from the compensation, usually without taking the case to court. The Brooklyn inquiry found the situation so serious that it declared "the prosecution of personal injury claims is no longer a phase of the practice of law, but has been reduced to a business," and therein lies "the real root of the trouble."

Recommendations for legislation are made. The most practical solution is to be found in the Philadelphia case, where the offenders were cast out by the legal profession as the climax of a campaign against 85 attorneys who are reported to have recovered more than $700,000 in accident cases. Bar associations can clean out these crooks, without any legislation, if they wish to do so.

THE SUBMETER SYSTEM.

A test case on the question of electric submeters is to be made before the Brooklyn Public Service Commission by the Brooklyn Edison Co. The submetering business is a mushroom industry constantly expanding. Particularly in Manhattan has submetering come to be a thorn in the side of public utility concerns and their customers. The scheme is this: A landlord or a submetering concern, acting under contract with the landlord, installs a master meter upon which is registered all the current consumed in the entire property, and guarantees a certain minimum monthly consumption in order to obtain wholesale rates. From the master meter wires lead to submeters, one to each tenant. Current is purchased at wholesale rates and tenants are billed at a rate sometimes in excess of the legal retail rate. The difference represents pure profit.

Some time ago an attempt was made before the local Public Utilities Commission to obtain permission for the installation of submeters. The attempt failed, but so attractive are the profits possible under submetering that it is not unlikely that another attempt will be made. The Brooklyn test case, therefore, is of interest to Washington. If the Brooklyn Edison Co. wins, submetering as an industry will be dealt a death blow.

The test case developed when the Brooklyn Edison Co. discovered that a submetering concern had begun operations in an apartment house. Immediately it threatened to take out the meter and discontinue service. The submeter concern then obtained a court order restraining Brooklyn Edison, pending a decision by the public utilities commission, and it is before that body that the case will be fought out. An array of counsel has been retained by both sides.

Submetering should never be permitted to gain a foothold in Washington. It is unfair to both the public and the public utility, and profits no one except the middleman, who is not subject to public regulation and who is therefore in a position to charge more for service than a public utility company is allowed to charge.

GAS PLANT VALUATION.

For the time being the gas company valuation hearings are halted. Last week counsel for the company moved that the Public Utilities Commission, before which the proceedings were being held, strike out testimony offered by Byers McK. Bachman, chief accountant of the commission, on the ground that it was based largely on a record of historical cost computed in a previous valuation hearing that is now before the courts. People's Council Fleaharty countered with a motion to suspend the present hearing on the ground that it is improper to conduct two valuation proceedings simultaneously. The commission, on Wednesday, sustained the motion, bringing the proceedings to a halt.

What course the company will pursue is problematical. It is said that its attorneys could go into court seeking to mandamus the commission to continue the hearings. In that event, however, the question of the propriety of simultaneous proceedings would be raised, and the company might obtain a decision that would leave no way open for further attack against its present valuation until court proceedings on the earlier case had been completed. For the time being the people of Washington have no reason to fear an increase in their gas rates, but they will watch with interest further manipulations that may be made for the purpose of boosting rates.

THE PRINCE IMPERIAL.

A romantic drama, produced some weeks ago in a Paris theater, purported to deal, under their own names, with several historic characters, all long since dead, among them being "Napoleon IV," the Empress Eugenie of France, and Queen Victoria of England. Napoleon IV is, of course, that only son of Napoleon III and Eugenie, who was known to Englishmen as the Prince Imperial and who, at the age of 23, was killed in Africa during the Zulu War in 1879.

Certain passages in the play aroused considerable displeasure, and caused the appearance in the newspapers of many letters which set forth the circumstances of the tragic death of the young Frenchman, and endeavored to clear him of the aspersions which, after the lapse of nearly 50 years, had been cast upon his name and fame. In particular, the presentation of the Prince as being engaged, under an assumed name, in a liaison with a woman was deeply and bitterly resented. This correspondence led to an investigation of all the events of the period, and the result has been to reestablish completely the splendid reputation which the Prince Imperial had enjoyed during his brief life and which reached its culminating point on the receipt of the news of his tragic death.

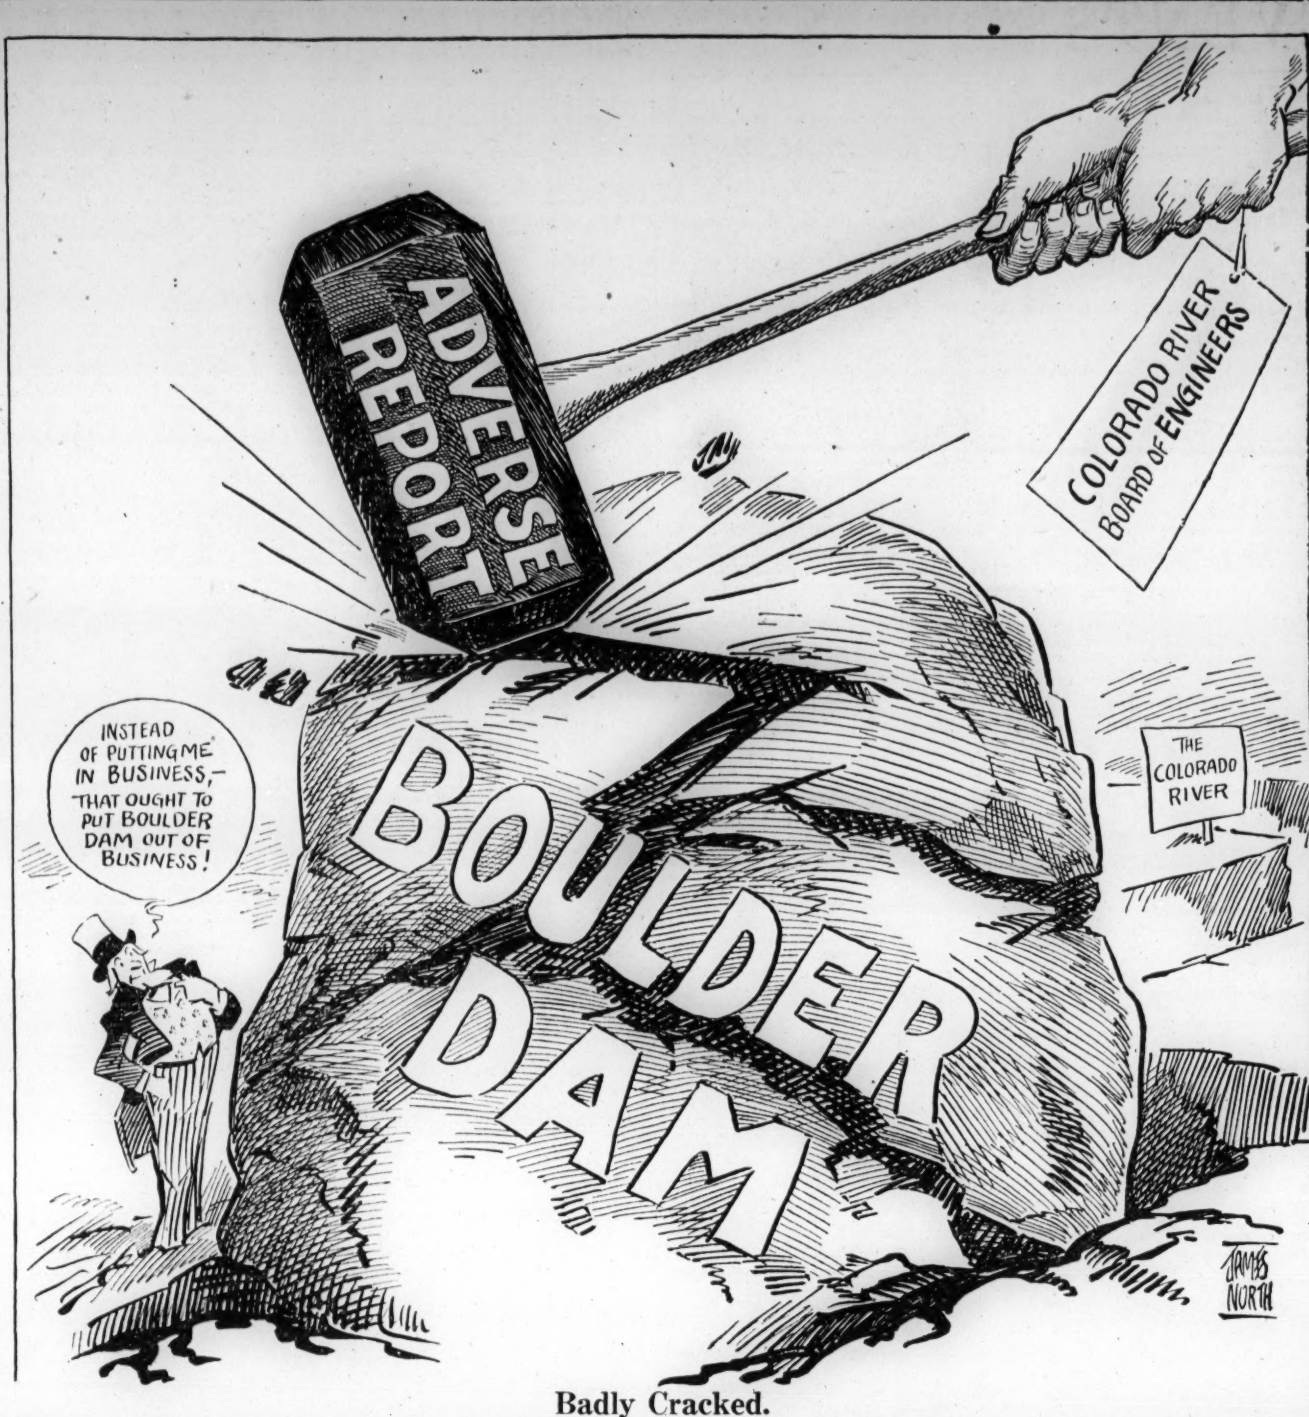

The boy's father had placed him in the Royal Academy at Woolwich in 1872, when he was 16 years of age, and in 1875 he passed out seventh of 34 in the commission class. Although, as a foreigner and with another allegiance, he could not take the commission in the British army for which his three years' work and training in a British military college had equipped him, he remained at heart a keen soldier and, after the disaster which befell the English troops at Isandhlwana in January, 1879, he asked permission to join up for active service in the African field. This request was met at first by a point blank refusal, but later, on representations made by his mother, Eugenie, who sacrificed her maternal feelings in order to gratify the earnest wish of her son, he was allowed to go as a spectator and observer.

Such a role was, however, distasteful to the Woolwich graduate and man of action, and soon after his arrival in Natal he became associated with a battery of artillery. He displayed so much skill in reconnaissance work, in surveying, and in map-making that Lord Chelmsford, commander in chief of the forces in the war, transferred him from his personal staff to the department of the quartermaster general. Every one knows how the Prince, when out with a small surveying party consisting of himself and 8 others, was surprised and set upon by a band of about 40 Zulus. Of the nine, five escaped and four were killed, among the latter the Prince Imperial, who might have escaped also had not his horse, frightened by the discharge of a volley at short range, ran ineffectively away. Thus brought to bay, the Prince with intrepid courage, engaged single handed with seven of the enemy and finally, overwhelmed by such tremendous odds, he fell with sixteen wounds, all in front.

The contemporary testimonials bear eloquent witness to the Prince's blameless and engaging character, to his noble nature, to his amiable, kindly heart, to his simple manners, to his high spirit, to his skill in many exercises, and to his indomitable courage, and are in themselves sufficient to repel the charges of his postmortem calumniator.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

The Library of Congress.

To the Editor of The Post:—Sir: Can you please tell me where the Congressional Library stood 100 years ago (1828) and how many volumes it had at that time? A VISITOR.

The Library of Congress in 1828, was in the west terrace of the Capitol. It had been almost destroyed by the British in August, 1814, and contained few books, including Jefferson's collection, about 30,000 volumes.—Editor.

Prompt Maryland Justice.

To the Editor of The Post:—Sir: The court, the jury, the police of Montgomery County, Md., are entitled to the commendation of all the people for their activity in the arrest, trial and conviction of a bank robber. On October 27 the bank was robbed; on December 4 the jury pronounced its verdict of guilty, and the court gave a sentence.

The police are to be commended for the promptness with which they followed the clues given as to the identity of the robber. The arrest followed; an indictment was quickly found; the court followed almost immediately with the trial; there was no delay, no hitch anywhere. The jury was as prompt and efficient as the court, and a verdict rendered in less than half an hour after submission of the case.

What a difference between the Maryland court and others which might be mentioned! Promptness, no needless delays, no confusion of the jury by long and useless questioning of witnesses, or by wrangling over law points. It is a great pity that we do not have more such courts in the country. The speed with which punishment follows the commission of a crime, and not the severity of the punishment, is the great deterrent. For one I take off my hat to the Montgomery court, jury and police.

Blue Laws for Washington.

To the Editor of The Post:—Sir: I wish to compliment you upon the splendid editorial in The Post of December 4, entitled "Wicked Washington." The national reformers stated that 83,000,000 people were living in cities that prohibited commercialized Sunday movies, leaving 37,000,000 living in jurisdictions subjected to the wickedness of Sunday movies. The facts of the case are that the large cities in the States that have State laws prohibiting Sunday movies have taken the matter in their own hands through the referendum, and are presenting commercialized Sunday movies every Sunday. About 85 per cent of the population of the United States are actually living in territory where they have access to Sunday movies, including even the States where the Sunday laws are the strictest.

Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, which have State laws prohibiting Sunday theaters and movies, allow local option in the large cities and towns, and every one of these States have Sunday movies in the cities. Massachusetts in the recent election voted by a majority of 2 to 1 not only to allow commercialized movies but all kinds of commercialized sports on Sunday. Wherever the issue is placed squarely before the people, the public sentiment is overwhelmingly in favor of liberalized Sunday laws.

Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, where the Sunday laws are most drastically enforced in Pennsylvania under the Sunday blue laws of 1794, have nothing to boast over the morality of Washington. The criminal record of Pittsburgh and Philadelphia is well known throughout the whole country. In New Jersey, which has the most drastic Sunday laws of any State in the Union, not even permitting any kind of recreation for diversion on Sunday, and which allows no music except sacred music to be played on Sunday, according to the

Whether Cooked or Printed, Good Food Is Dangerous If Swallowed Whole.

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

WHEN the Prince of Wales visited a city in South America, the school children welcomed him by singing "God Save the King." They seemed to be singing in English, but actually pronounced no words at all. They had learned sounds, meaningless to them, that parodied English well enough to fool the hearer.

Which child learns more in school, the one that learns its lessons "by heart" and can repeat them word for word, or the one that absorbs the idea and can express it in words of its own?

In every school there are children that climb from grade to grade and graduate with honor without ever having achieved an idea. They memorize rules and definitions, parrot-like, and understand them little better than a parrot could.

We call that education, but the child profits little more than it would if the printed definitions were pasted on the outside of its skull.

Schooling isn't worth while unless it teaches the child to think. Memorizing words pays no profit; it must absorb ideas and learn to form ideas of its own.

Children that go through school without any eagerness for knowledge—and this doubtless includes the majority of them—develop the habit of accepting printed words at their face value. As adults they believe what they read, and the more they read the less they think.

Literate people are in the habit of scorning "yokels" and workers who have no passion for books. But in the country and in the factories of the city, where the hands can perform their required task while the mind is intent on other matters, men who read very little do a great deal of solid thinking.

Their little reading suggests ideas, and these they masticate as they work. It would be difficult to find a farmer or machine shop laborer whose conversation does not indicate considerable pondering over worthwhile questions.

Those who read a great deal are prone to depend on writers for their opinions. Unconsciously they absorb a point of view and a set of principles, and thereafter they read nothing that contradicts the ideas they have made their own.

Children of today alarm their parents by refusing to accept hearsay evidence and demanding the proof, but their independence need occasion no alarm. Right or wrong, they are free—and free minds will work out an eventual salvation, which enslaved minds never can.

Reading is dangerous unless the reader has wit enough to discard as well as absorb. The modern youngster, insisting on the right to do his own thinking, will not be permanently injured by his reading.

The children to be shielded—the children who need a censor—are those whose foolish parents or teachers have scolded them for daring to think and taught them to accept the printed word as the whole of truth.

statutes, can not find as a general rule a jury that is either willing to indict or convict a violator of the law.

The fact that the national reformers are calling upon the "Christian people of the 48 States" to pass a Sunday law for the District of Columbia shows clearly that such a proposed law is religious in character. The fact that these reformers approve of the motion picture show on every other day than Sunday is another evidence that they are seeking to protect the day rather than the morals of the people as far as the motion picture shows are concerned.

Better Care of Dependent Children.

To the Editor of The Post:—Sir: The proper care of dependent children is, of course, of the greatest importance. The welfare of the community depends greatly on it. Proper treatment of the children is the foundation of the welfare and good condition of the people of the community. It is to the interest of the community to provide remuneration to widows so as to enable them to take care of their children properly and where that is impracticable, to board out the children in good families under proper supervision, or where an institution is necessary, to provide cottage plan institutions such as the Hebrew Sheltering and Guardian Orphan Asylum in Pleasantville. If these principles are followed it will have the effect of greatly reducing criminality. We will have better people, better citizens, and altogether a better community.

For the welfare of our community the right treatment, education, and proper surroundings of the children and young people is most important. Most of the prisoners that are now in Mileage and Deaths.

New Orleans Times Picayune: In the United States it required, last year, something like 640,000 miles of automobile operation to kill a man. This undoubtedly is out a few thousand miles one way or the other, but the figure is near enough to show two things: First, that he actual danger is not quite so great as one would imagine; but, on the other hand, it demonstrates, when analyzed, that there is a furious lot of auto mileage perpetrated in the United States of America each twelve months. Assuming that there are in operation 20,000,000 machines, to an average of 8,000 miles a year—both of the estimates are ultraconservative—we discover a total annual operation of 160,000,000,000 miles. For the period there were actually reported 23,312 deaths from accidents in which the automobile played an important part. These positive figures include only 91.3 per cent of the population of the Nation, and if we estimate the unreported fraction on the same basis, we reach a total auto killing per annum of 25,533. It is thus calculated by the United States Department of Commerce. Therefore a good sized cityful or an imposing army die each year largely because of human carelessness and unnecessary haste.

CONTROL OF FLOODS URGED ON CONGRESS

Rivers and Harbors Conclave
Cites Heavy Losses in Florida and Louisiana.

R. J. WILSON REELECTED

An echo of the recent hurricanes in Florida was heard yesterday at the final session of the National Rivers and Harbors Convention at the Willard Hotel.

Resolutions passed by the convention urged the Government to seek immediately to solve the flood problems of the delta lands of the Mississippi and Caloosahatchee Rivers, "which have caused the floods of Lake Okechobee and the Everglades and resulted in the greatest loss of life in the history of the United States arising from natural causes, with the exception of one."

The convention also promulgated declarations urging early completion of Mississippi flood-control surveys; continuation of the procedure of administering all rivers and harbors activities through the Engineer Corps of the Army; completion of all authorized projects within five years, wherever possible; and appropriation by Congress of necessary funds as rapidly as they are required; passage by Congress of the pending rivers and harbors bill and coordination and standardization of existing waterways projects in order that full economies of water transportation may be realized.

Riley J. Wilson, of Ruston, La., was reelected president; S. A. Thompson, secretary-treasurer, and Miss Mabel Goepfert, Washington, assistant secretary-treasurer. Directors and State vice presidents also were named. Frank P. Leech, Washington, was named district vice president.

Joseph E. Ransdell, United States senator from Louisiana, and John H. Small, of Washington, were named honorary directors for life.

Senator Ransdell, addressing the convention, declared flood control on the Mississippi the greatest engineering undertaking the world has attempted.

Maj. Gen. Edgar Jadwin, who retires next year as chief of Army engineers, praised the corps and said:

"The corps will never fail in its devotion to the interests of our country, its waterways and its waterway users."

Senator Henrik Shipstead, Minnesota, urged action for speedy development of the Mississippi channel to a uniform depth of not less than nine feet. No date was fixed for the next meeting.

Zoo Curator to Speak.

Dr. Raymond Lee Ditmars, curator of the mammalian and reptilian department of the New York Zoological Park, will address the members of the National Geographic Society tonight at a meeting in the Washington Auditorium. Dr. Ditmars recently returned from Honduras, where he spent some time at the snake serum station at Tela.

DAVIS SAYS MINES PRODUCE TOO MUCH

Secretary of Labor Denies
"Competition Is Life of Trade" in Coalfields.

Declarations that "the mining industry is producing too much, and the competition is disastrous" were made by Secretary of Labor Davis in an address before the American Mining Congress yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel. "Unreasonable competition seems to have paralyzed some parts of both the metal and coal industries," the Secretary said. He added that in the matter of coal "it is a falsehood that competition is the life of trade" and that "industries producing luxuries and semi-luxuries are striving to cheapen or break down the price of coal."

E. C. Alford, special assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury, advocated avoidance of litigation in settlement of tax liability. McKelvey W. Kreigh, chief of the tax division of the mining congress, pleaded for "a fair and just Federal tax policy."

Henry B. Fernald, tax authority of New York, urged elimination of taxation of capital gains and advocated a flat rate applicable to all incomes. J. D. Francis, New York coal company head, went on record as preferring reorganization of the bituminous coal industry, with distributing and sales agencies in the various producing districts to government control and regulation of the industry. In the industry were attributed by Francis to failure of railroads prior to 1923 to furnish adequate transportation and to frequent and long strikes.

Dr. L. E. Young, Pittsburgh, was named chairman of a new section of the congress devoted to mechanization of coal mines. At the annual meeting of the board of governors of the Southern divisions of the congress, Atlanta, Ga., was selected for the 1929 session of the Southern Industrial Development conference.

Santa Unable to Accompany Post's Party on Way South

Agrees to Help Explorers Pass Layluk, the North Wind;
Everyone Sorry to Leave Castle Where Happiness
Reigns Supreme All Year.

By HOLLY HERRY

(Special Correspondence of The Post.)
Santa Claus Castle, Dec. 6.—Our visit to Santa's home is nearing an end. Realizing how busy the great man is the last few days before Christmas, we are going to leave his castle and start back to civilization, that we may reach home before Christmas.

Capt. Kleinschmidt, leader of The Washington Post's expedition to the North Pole to find Santa, has been trying hard to induce the great man to accompany us on our return trip, but he says he does not see how he can alter his plans, so it looks as though we will have to wait until Christmas Eve to see him.

He has, however, agreed to start out with us to see that we get safely by old Layluk, the North Wind. Santa feels that when Layluk allowed us to enter the pass on our way North he may have had it in mind to destroy our party on the way back.

As we have a lot of motion pictures showing life around Santa's home and among the Eskimos whom we visited on the way up here, Santa does not want us to fall back on outskirts of civilized territory. He knows how anxious all the children in Washington are to see these pictures, and he would not disappoint them in this any more than he would when they wait for him at Christmas.

As we pack, ready for our journey to the South, Capt. Kleinschmidt is taking the last "movie" shots, with special pictures of Donner, Blitzen, Prancer, Dancer, Cupid, Comet, the great reindeer team which pulls Santa on his long trip Christmas Eve. We know every one wants to see these reindeer, grating on the plains outside the castle.

Santa seems just as sorry to see us leave as we are to go, but he is glad to have been of service to all the little folks who are so interested in him. I think Mrs. Kleinschmidt is going to "enjoy" a good crying spell when we leave, because she has fallen completely in love with Santa's castle and all the things which have made our stay so pleasant. She is anxious to get back to Washington, but hates to leave here, and the rest of us feel the same way.

Declares Refuse Offered
Gift of Farm If He Would Kill Him.

Logan, Ohio, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—As an ancient photograph rasped out the strains of "When the Sun Goes Down," Jacob Konechler, farmer-recluse in the Hocking County hills, was shot to death at his own request, according to a purported confession, made to police here today by Ray Featheroff, 19-year-old neighbor.

According to Featheroff's alleged confession, he was hunting near Konechler's cabin last Friday when he chased up a rabbit near the place.

Konechler, the confession said, asked Featheroff to come in and bring his gun. "When I went into the parlor," Featheroff said, "I told him I was a police officer. He told me he was in debt and tired of living and he wanted to die. He said I could have his farm if I'd shoot him."

"Then he walked over to the phonograph and started up the record 'When the Sun Goes Down.' When he was standing there I shot him in the back of the head. I didn't stop to look after I pulled the trigger."

WOMAN IS SOUGHT IN COURT SHOOTING

Unidentified, She Is Thought to Have Passed Pistol to Sigmund Weiss.

PASSED GROUP IN HALL

New York, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—An unidentified woman was sought by police today as the person who is believed to have passed to Sigmund (Whitney) Weiss the revolver with which he attempted to shoot his way to freedom in the Criminal Courts Building yesterday, after the failure of what authorities regard as a plot to kill Judge George L. Donnellan.

How and where it was possible for a woman to have handed the weapon to Weiss no one would say, the search being started when police recalled that Murray Fershing, a gangster "pal" of Weiss, hinted last June a woman would help Weiss in executing a death threat by Fershing against the judge.

Fershing was sentenced to twenty years in Sing Sing and Weiss was convicted for an East Side jewelry robbery last March, and it was on this offense that Weiss yesterday was to have been tried as a fourth offender and automatically receive a sentence to life imprisonment.

When a revolver fell from his trouser leg Weiss wounded two guards in a corridor of the Criminal Courts Building before he was shot and killed by John Doyle, captain of the court attendants.

Weiss was searched as he left the Tombs Prison and again a few minutes later when he entered the Criminal Courts Building. Moving from the prisoner's pen on the fourth floor, however, he and his guards passed between two groups of witnesses in the corridor. One phase of the inquiry was directed toward the possibility that some one in the group may have smuggled the gun to the gangster.

COLUMBIAN TROOPS FOUGHT BY RIOTERS

8 Strikers Killed, 20 Injured
Under Martial Law in Magdalena Area.

U. S. INTERESTS ARE HIT

Bogota, Colombia, Dec. 6 (U.P.). Federal soldiers were on the march to night to enforce order in the Santa Marta district of the Department of Magdalena, where 30,000 striking plantation workers have indulged in bloody riots.

Minister of War Rengifo announced that eight strikers had been killed and twenty wounded when a mob of them attacked soldiers Wednesday night. What has happened since then is not known, but further bloodshed is feared.

An earlier dispatch told of a clash between strikers and a patrol of 23 soldiers, in which one man was killed and several wounded. Another said that the strikers were attacking employees of the United Fruit Co., an American concern which has about 9,000 workers involved.

Martial Law Declared.

The government declared martial law in the area and appointed a civil and military governor, after investigation had led it to believe that the strike was a "subversive movement" in which communistic elements were participating. The situation arose from a dispute between employers and workers over the question of compulsory insurance. The government tried vainly to mediate.

As the troops marched forward toward the area tonight the government regarded the situation as grave.

Legation Report Reassuring.

The Colombian government is "in control" of the disturbances in the Province of Magdalena, where 12,000 laborers are said to be raiding banana plantations and taking part in communistic riots, according to a report received yesterday by the Colombian legation. While admitting that the disorders have not yet subsided, the government has troops at its disposal in sufficient numbers to prevent more serious trouble, messages stated.

Officials of the State Department reported that strikes in Colombia have assumed rather menacing proportions, according to word received from the department. The Colombian legation has wired the government for additional details on the disorders in Magdalena, and the department attaches of the legation reiterated their information that these troubles can not prove of sufficient consequence to threaten the solidarity of the republic.

Sound Is Focused By Horn Invention

Dirigible Los Angeles Helps
Test Device to Increase
Safety in Landing.

Camden, N. J., Dec. 6 (A.P.).—The Navy dirigible Los Angeles, which was tested in a test of a contrivance designed to make safer the landing of aircraft in fog, and called a "super-directional horn."

The horn is so constructed it can throw a volume of sound along a path as a searchlight can focus light. The sound may be directed at the will of the operator. The device was developed by Lieut. R. C. Mayer, of the Los Angeles crew, and E. T. Williams, of the Victor Talking Machine Co.

When the Los Angeles was 3,000 feet above the roof of the Victor company's plant, where the horn was placed, music was thrown toward it, and the dirigible replied by flashing a light that it had heard the sound. Other music was thrown skyward while the dirigible was 10,000 feet away from the horn.

In order to aid an aviator to land safely at flying fields during fog it would be necessary to have four horns bound the field, each of a different tone.

Yeggs at College Park Crack Safe, Make Escape

Prince Georges County police and railroad detectives are searching for the band of safe crackers who yesterday morning blew up the safe of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Station at College Park, Md.

The yeggs are believed to have boarded a train which left the station shortly after 4 o'clock yesterday morning and to have escaped to Baltimore. They did not obtain any loot, as they were frightened away before prying open the doors of the money compartment inside the station. Had they succeeded in reaching the latter compartment their gain would have been $250, which police say would not have paid for the equipment used in opening the safe.

Smack Picks Up Nonswimmer—Another of Crew Reaches Shore.

Coca Beach, Fla., Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Two of the five men aboard the yacht Astor, which burned last night in the 9 miles off Melbourne, Fla., had been rescued tonight. Edward Sattinover, a member of the crew, was picked up today by a fishing smack and early tonight an unidentified seaman, exhausted by more than 24 hours swimming in a life preserver, pulled himself up on the beach at Melbourne.

"There are six others out there in the ocean," he gasped, and then collapsed before his name could be learned. He was taken to a hospital. Sattinover said there were only five men aboard the craft.

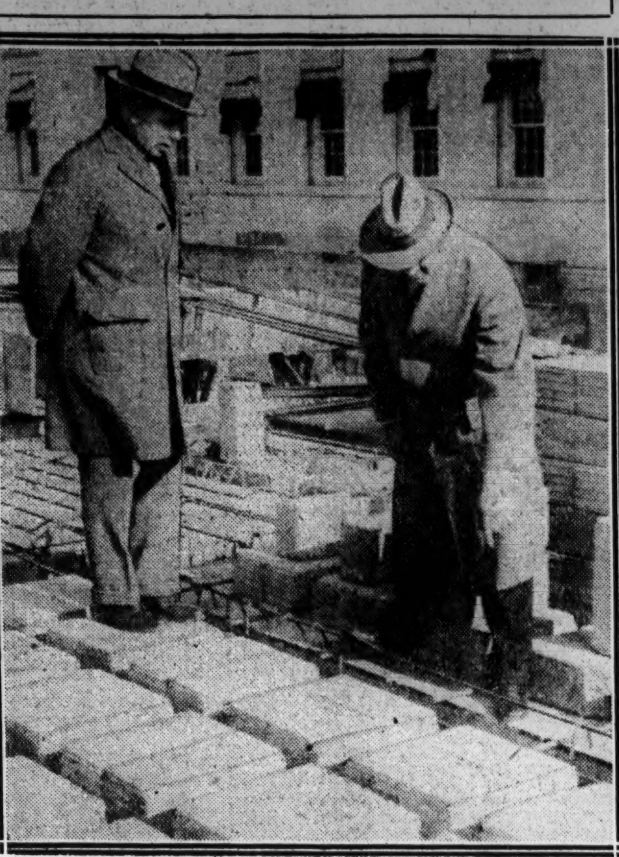

Sattinover, who jumped into the ocean, resigned to death because he could not swim, attributed his being saved to that one fact.

The yacht, en route from Jacksonville to West Palm Beach, caught fire when the motor backfired and flames enveloped the craft, forcing the crew to take to the ocean.

HUSBAND SAYS WIFE HELPED COURT GIRL AS ROTHSTEIN'S FOE

Organist Asserts Legal Mate
Invited Miss Van Wyen
to Sayville Home.

SPOUSE AIDED MARRIAGE WOMAN'S NAME IS CLEW

New York, Dec. 6 (N.Y.W.S.).—Behind the big marriage Wednesday of Herbert Leigh-Emanuel, church organist, of Sayville, Long Island, and Martha Van Wyen, cloistered 19-year-old daughter of a West Sayville storekeeper, is a story of romance, realism and foreshadowing.

Leigh-Emanuel and Mrs. Leigh-Emanuel No. 1 made this apparent today in an interview at their Sayville home. The organist, just home from jail in Riverhead, released in $5,000 bail on a charge of bigamy, related virtually all the important details of his adventure.

Mrs. Leigh-Emanuel, who accompanied her husband and Mrs. Leigh-Emanuel No. 2 to New York for the marriage license and witnessed the bigamous second marriage, had little to say. But she approved and substantiated all the organist said.

First of all, Leigh-Emanuel said he and his first wife have realized for years that they no longer loved each other. They married in Poughkeepsie, N.Y., in 1915.

A year later they came to New York for a divorce. Their children have been born to them and another is expected. As they discussed this odd situation, the organist said he no longer loved each other. Leigh-Emanuel said that his first wife was at bottom responsible for his second marriage. She urged it, he said, and Mrs. Leigh-Emanuel No. 1 interjected a simple "I did."

From that point on the narrative took on a stark realism. Both, in agreement, said that the organist should marry Miss Van Wyen simply concluded that they could do this, keep it quiet while Mrs. Leigh-Emanuel obtained a divorce and then be remarried.

There was nothing that made our marriage imperative except that the three of us thought it was morally wrong for me to love Martha, and for Martha to love me, and not be married," said Leigh-Emanuel.

On his left hand he wore a gold signet ring, which he later described as a somewhat amazing gift, amazing because it was a joint present some time ago from Mrs. Leigh-Emanuel, No. 1, and the younger girl.

He said it had been agreed between his two wives that after the second wedding, Mrs. Leigh-Emanuel, No. 1, was to go to Reno, Nev., for a divorce and he was to go to Detroit, where Mrs. Leigh-Emanuel No. 2 would reenter a school she left a year ago.

One of the interesting things the organist disclosed was the manner in which he courted the young girl. Ethel Leigh-Emanuel would arrange for Martha to come to her home, specifying that they meet several blocks distant from the organist's home, and the two women enter together and thus block suspicion.

Both Leigh-Emanuel and his first wife are confused about their present difficulty.

"I realize now that it was done on an emotional impulse," said Leigh-Emanuel, to which his wife nodded assent. "We thought only of ourselves and nothing about the law, just because we did not dream anybody would ever find out."

BILLER NOW HUNTED AS ROTHSTEIN'S FOE

Underworld Cashier Is Cited in Indictment as One of Gambler's Slayers.

WOMAN'S NAME IS CLEW

New York, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—As police continued their search today for Hyman "Gilly" Biller, hunted cashier from the many-chambered business office of the underworld, it developed that he is the secretly named figure in the blanket indictment of four men for the murder of Arnold Rothstein.

Police revealed yesterday that they were looking for Biller "for questioning," but today it was learned from official sources that he is much more to the case than just one more material witness; that he is, in fact, one of the four men who police believe tried to slay Rothstein.

John Doe and Richard Roe, the legal straw men who are the other mystery men of the indictment, began to take on some semblance of actuality today as the result of revelations by "Nigger Nate" Raymond, gambling associate of Rothstein and George McManus, McManus is the only one of the four indicted for the shooting of Rothstein.

Raymond was reported to have told District Attorney Banton the name of a woman who would know the whereabouts of Messrs. Doe and Roe, who are reputedly professional gunmen hired by enemies of Rothstein to "put him away." Search was at once instituted for this woman, whose identity was not made public, and in reward for his information Raymond's bail of $100,000, in which he had been held, was lowered to $10,000, which he furnished.

Raymond's release under low bail left only one material witness still in custody under bail so high he could not furnish it. He is Sidney Stajer, confidential secretary to Rothstein, and his $100,000 bail has withstood habeas corpus proceedings and other court moves.

$30,000,000 ASTOR ESTATE SUIT FAILS

Heirs of Original John Jacob's
Partner Not Entitled to Share, Court Holds.

SUED ON 90-YEAR TRUST

New York, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Federal Judge Thatcher today dismissed a $32,000,000 suit against the estate of John Jacob Astor brought by descendants of Christopher and Valentine Emerick, who were partners of John Nicholas Emerick, brother of John Jacob Astor, who was Astor's partner a hundred years ago.

The plaintiffs based their suit on an alleged trust established by John Nicholas Emerick in 1815. Its terms provided, the complaint stated, that 90 years after date of its execution the principal and accumulations of Emerick's holdings in his partnership with Astor should be divided among descendants of Emerick's brothers, Christopher and Valentine.

Valuable Properties Involved.

The suit involved valuable properties now held by the Astor estate, among them the site of the Hotel Astor in Times Square.

Judge Thatcher held that the alleged trust was void under the laws of New York and Pennsylvania in force prior to the death of John Nicholas Emerick. Neither the present defendants nor any of the hundreds of other claimant heirs of Emerick's brothers is entitled to sue as such, the court ruled. Judge Thatcher's opinion did not dispose of the possibility of another suit by heirs and descendants of John Nicholas Emerick, maker of the trust.

Efforts of the Emerick heirs to regain from the Astors what they held to be their inheritance failed. Judge Thatcher's records in many sections of the country a romantic story.

Several years ago, when the first of the Emerick heirs filed his suit, the story of the original Astor's early adventures in the fur trade was dragged from the limbo of past generations.

In the suit dismissed today, Edna Carnahan, Christine Campbell and John Thomas Emerick, plaintiffs, alleged that in 1787 Astor and John Nicholas Emerick entered into a partnership in which Emerick held a two-thirds interest.

Together their business prospered. In 1815 Emerick executed his alleged trust. Emerick was lost not long after that in the sinking of a trading vessel off Labrador. Astor continued the business alone, until his death.

Years later, the Emerick heirs, now multiplying and scattered throughout the country, began their search for documents to substantiate their claims. A year ago one of them reported the discovery of a trust agreement in an ancient leather trunk.

By this document, Judge Thatcher ruled today, John Nicholas Emerick intended only "to plan, beyond this life, or a living descendant of his two brothers any share in his estate."

"It follows," the court said, "that upon Emerick's death, his heirs, and next of kin succeeded to his estate, including the right, if there is any to an ownership of the property here in question."

Congress Members Urge Its Construction at Hearing
Held Here.

Construction of the George Washington-Potomac Memorial Bridge across the Potomac River from near Persimmon Point, Va., to a spot near Lower Cedar Point, Md., developed no objection at a public hearing held by the War Department engineers in the board room of the District Building yesterday.

Representative Stephen W. Gambrill, of Maryland, advocated construction of the bridge. He declared that the bridge would give the farmers of the rich tide-water section of Virginia greater access to the National Capital market area.

D. J. Calahan, of the Norfolk & Washington Steamboat Co., offered the only objection advanced at the hearing, but withdrew that objection later when engineers for the corporation which proposes to build the span pointed out that the bridge would be 135 feet above high-water level across the channel.

Shorey Case Decision Is Delayed

D. C. Golf Body Hears Charges Involving Rule Violations. Winner of Title Denies Accusations; To Investigate Further.

By HENRY LITCHFIELD WEST. THE executive committee of the District of Columbia Golf Association met last night to consider the case of John C. Shorey, who has been credited with winning the District of Columbia junior amateur golf championship in a 36-hole medal play competition played last September on the course of the Indian Spring Club. Shorey won the title with a total of 153 as against Karl P. Kellerman's 155. No decision was reached.

The proceedings were conducted in star-chamber fashion behind closed doors in the offices of C. Chester Caywood, president of the association, in the Woodward Building. All the members of the committee—President Caywood, Secretary William C. Barr, Dr. Bruce L. Taylor, Middleton Beaman and Albert E. Steinem—were present and participated in the questioning.

The first witness to be conducted into the secret recesses where the committee was assembled was J. Monro Hunter, the professional at the Indian Spring Club.

Hunter, in the absence of any of the officials of the association, was in charge of the tournament and was out on the course when he observed three violations of the rules governing stroke competition, these infractions being later reported in a formal communication to the association.

Hunter's specific charges were that Shorey pressed down the line of his putt with his foot on the eleventh hole, improved his lie behind his ball in the rough on the sixteenth hole and removed something from a trap on the eighteenth.

He was accompanied by only one witness, Thos. D. Webb, Jr., one of the participants in the tournament, but submitted written statements from Roger Peacock and James A. Drayton, who had played with him, exonerating him from any wrongdoing.

He also produced a letter from S. H. Buttz, the club champion, which stated that Shorey's ball was in a trap on the fourth hole but that his second shot was played directly to the green and was followed by three putts.

After nearly three hours had been spent in listening to these conflicting statements President Caywood announced that it would be impossible to announce a decision until further investigation had been made.

GRUDGE GAME TOMORROW AT G. U.

Freshmen-Sophomores Mingle on Grid in "Battle of Caps."

DOWN with the soph and off with the caps, is the battle cry of Georgetown University's freshmen. But while the first-year Hoyas grow heated over the outcome of tomorrow's annual interclass football struggle, the sophs say jaconically: "We shall see."

Placing their direction in the hands of a board of strategists, composed of Johnny Tomalin, Jim Mooney, Sam Cordovano and Wynkoop, older varsity players, the sophomore gridders are facing the battle calmly, confident they will take the decision and the consequent fun of keeping the rookies in complete subjection to their desires and wants for the remainder of the school year.

The freshmen will seek the right to throw off their skull caps, the insignia of their class, in which the name of the game got its origin. Victory will not only give them that privilege, but enable them to walk side by side and exchange who crack for wise crack with the sophs without fear of consequences.

And such reward, they say, is worth wiping up the dribble with the second-year team.

Almost the Naked Truth

By JAMES S. COLLINS

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—Howard C. Griffith, the St. Nicholas arena boxing fan, takes exception to the cry of fair play in his determination to call the high hand of the New York State Athletic Commission, which forced Griffith to postpone a scheduled bout by allowing Madison Square Garden to stage an extra show on Monday night.

No one has ever accused or suspected the commission of dishonesty, but its actions repeatedly have convicted it of injustices. The St. Nicholas arena pays the State the same license fee as the Garden, $750, and is entitled to as much consideration as the bigger and wealthier Madison Square Garden Corporation.

Hansen's Appetite Remains Despite His Trouncing. Although the cauliflower common stock of three of its denizens fell to rock bottom when Knute Hansen, Walter P. Chrysler's protégé, was flattened by K. O. Christner, there was no panic in Wall Street. Mr. Chrysler and his associates became interested in Hansen a year or so ago, when he breezed into town with a record of 10 wins and a prodigious appetite. To bring out the promise it was necessary to underwrite the appetite, and they are reported to have lured out $75 a week to keep the big Dane in porthouse steaks over a stretch of weary months.

Now the promise has evaporated, and all Hansen's backers have to show for their expenditure is a lot of canceled checks and a big Dane with a big appetite, unimpaired by his defeat. Whether they go on paying his board bills is a matter still to be considered, especially by Mr. Hansen.

Other hard hit by the blows that flattened Knute were the battalions of lawyers who have been drawing down fat fees in the squabble for the contract on his services.

As for Will Gibson, who recently bought a managerial interest in the alleged fighter, this is the crowning blow of a career of sorrows. First, Benny Leonard, at the height of his drawing power, decided to retire as an unbeaten world champion. As soon as he came out of the faint that followed Benny's announcement, Mr. Gibson acquired Gene Tunney and nominally, at least, managed him into the heavyweight championship of the world.

Again it seemed that Will was sitting pretty, when on a bright July morning he awoke to find that another champion had walked out on him into retirement. The conductor of the department was present when Mr. Tunney announced dissolution of the partnership and will never forget the agonized look that took up residence in Mr. Gibson's big eyes.

Mr. Gibson had only recently recovered from the shock occasioned by the blow-up of Louis (Kid) Kaplan, for whom, as featherweight champion, Mr. Gibson had paid a goodly sum. For a time it appeared that Mr. Gibson was utterly crushed and he did indeed announce that he was through with the boxing racket.

Mr. Gibson had been in retirement but a few days when something whispered a fateful name into his ample ears. The name, of course, was Hansen.

Long Search Promised to Find Head to Fit Tunney's Crown. Hansen's defeat by Christner and Riko's by the impossible Maloney are two more indications that it will be a long time before the trustees of the National Association of Professional Athletes can find a head to fit Tunney's crown.

Many Trades Effected and Reported

Giants Seeking Luque or Donahue; Bluege Safe With Nats.

Deals Abound Among Minor Clubs; Majors Confirm None.

By IRVING BELL. (Associated Press Sports Writer).

TORONTO, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Thirteen of the sixteen major league managers and scores of managers of minor league clubs today continued to talk of player trades, but apparently did little business. Rumors about the lobby of the convention hotel of the national association insisted that several major league clubs had arranged for a transfer of players by purchase or trade, but no confirmation could be found.

One report heard on every side was that Pitches Adolfo Luque or Pete Donahue, or possibly both, would be sent by the Cincinnati Reds to the New York Giants. The Giants to go to the Reds were not named.

Another report concerned the New York Yankees and Boston Red Sox. This arrangement, about which the management of the two American League clubs said they had not been consulted, was by Buddy Myer, Boston third baseman, to move to New York, with one or more Yankees going to Boston.

Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Club, was outspoken in his denial that his star third baseman, Ossie Bluege, would be traded.

The Yankees were reported also to be negotiating for the two minor league clubs, Syracuse, in the New York-Pennsylvania League, and Chambersburg, in the Blue Ridge.

Announcement was expected also that "Bubbles" Hargrave, long a Cincinnati catcher, would be appointed manager of the St. Paul Club.

A trade between Southern Association clubs sent Catcher Johnny Brock from Atlanta to Nashville in exchange for Catcher Cliff Knox.

Don Songer, left-handed pitcher, was sold by Toronto to Fort Worth.

Gabby Street, former battery mate of Walter Johnson, and later a minor league manager, signed today with St. Louis Cardinals and will be assigned a managerial post somewhere in the Cardinal chain.

Jimmy Hamilton, former manager of the Nashville, Tenn., club, sold his stock in the Nashville club, and was reported negotiating with Atlanta for a possible business connection with that club.

Clarence Rowland, former White Sox manager and American League umpire, was sold by the Browns to the Nashville club and took the offer under advisement.

Another Nashville transaction was the purchase of Joe Klugman, infielder, from Memphis.

Rochester sold Dick Urban, infielder, to Fort Worth, Tex.

In another trade Montreal agreed to give infielder Joe Faber to Omaha for Snake Hensley, first baseman.

The St. Louis Browns sold Guy Sturdy to the Birmingham Club of the Southern Association, and the Chicago Cubs bought Pitcher Edward Lautenbach from Reading.

The Bennett brothers, outfielders, have finally been separated as a result of a dispute at the Boston Hotel. Bennett and Red Bennett were members of the Milwaukee Club last season. They broke in together in the Western Association, where they played with Tulsa in the Western League and were promoted to the Browns together. They were sold to the Browns separately, one to Milwaukee, now Red Bennett has been sold to Wichita Falls, in the Texas League, and Herschel Bennett to Birmingham, in the Southern Association.

Another southpaw pitcher changed his base today when Fort Worth sold A. P. (Lefty) Johns to Hollywood, of the Pacific Coast League.

Maurice Archdeacon, an outfielder, once known as baseball's fastest runner, was sold by the club of the International League to Atlanta, in the Southern League, completing a deal that involved three clubs. Buffalo yesterday completed a deal when Biddle paid $25,000 for 30 per cent interest in the Belgian middleweight.

De Vos is an 8-to-10 favorite over Huddins to win Monday night's bout. Huddins, however, is rounding into shape rapidly and critics believe there is a good chance that he may spring another of the upsets that have starred the boxing world in the past week. De Vos will carry the west advantage.

Infant Son of Rockne Again Operated On. South Bend, Ind., Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Jack Rockne, 24-year-old son of Knute K. Rockne, Notre Dame football coach and athletic director, was operated on today for a second time to relieve the boxing world in the past week. De Vos will carry the west advantage.

INCORPORATE Is New Idea In FIGHT INDUSTRY

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—(The news that Mr. Knute (pronounced Nud) Hansen, the prominent corporation lawyer, was tapped on his chin and knocked insensible by a person called K. O. Christner, in Cleveland, apparently calls for a complete reorganization of the prize fight industry in the interests of the stockholders.

The affair seems to be a case of gross mismanagement or loose matchmaking, which amounts to the same thing. If the ruling interests in the property refuse to accede to a change of administration the minority stockholders might appeal to the United States court for a receivership to conserve Knute's chin, whiplash, their principal asset. I do not believe there is any precedent for the preservation of a prize fighter's chin by a court order, but the corporation era of the prize fight industry is still new and innovations are being introduced every day.

Other Corporations Have Taken Them on Chin.

Mr. James I. Bush, one of Mr. Tex Rickard's millionaires, states that Mr. Walter P. Chrysler, the automobile magnate, is one of the principal shareholders and this is reassuring because I am certain that he will not tolerate any such managerial laxity as the calamity in Cleveland seems to indicate. Neither will he be disturbed by the tap on Knute's chin, realizing that the New Haven railroad and other properties which are now enjoying great prosperity once took them on the chin, too, only to be restored by shrewd administration.

The corporation style of operating a heavyweight property may have its drawbacks. Authority is delegated to a manager or board of managers and calamitous happenings may occur to the serious detriment of the shareholders' interests before they can meet to take steps. But it also has its advantages and taking on Knute's chin with another, the corporation method seems the better one.

"Meet Your New Partner" Is Quaint, Old Custom.

For one thing, it is practically impossible to cut a corporation out of the prize fight industry. It is something to be considered seriously in the operation of a prize fight, not the particular case of the prize fighter is a heavyweight with a theoretical chance at the heavyweight championship of the world, valued at several millions.

Experience has frequently shown that it is quite dangerous to life and limb to ignore a new partner. The well-paying pugilistic property. The unscrupulous element is so aggressive that the moment an individual proprietor begins to reap large returns on a pugilist, he is likely to receive a visit from a mysterious stranger, who says, "Meet your new partner."

"What do you mean, new partner?" the proprietor inquires. "I have not got no partner."

"Think it over until tomorrow," the visitor suggests. "I am sure you will decide that you have a partner."

The proprietor frequently decides that he has a partner, after all, and there is a division of the interests.

Ignoring a New Partner Found to Be Unhealthy.

I am informed that the new partner generally assumes the majority interest in order to discourage greed in the old owner of the fighter and thus promote the tendency of the game toward the pugilist and uplift. And quite often the new majority owner decides that he can not agree on matters of management with the old manager and, therefore, buys him out at price agreed on by the majority.

It is considered quite injurious to health to ignore a new partner. Mr. Mel Cook, who developed a property known as Cannonball Eddie Martin and obtained the banishment championship of the world, insisted that he could not remember ever having taken a partner into the business, notwithstanding several insistent reminders.

And one evening while Mr. Cook was sitting among the sport loving throng at a ringside in Brooklyn watching an exhibition of manly sport, it was discovered that his throat had been wounded as though by a knife blade. I believe it was later decided that Mr. Cook had chafed his throat on his own collar, necessitating a long sojourn in a hospital, and a black eye on the exhibition of sport was scotched in the twinkling of an eye.

JOHNSON OFFERS FIVE PLAYERS TO RED SOX IN RUMORED TRADING

Would Give Boston Lisenbee, Gaston, Reeves, Cronin and Gillis for Former Washington Infielder, Is Report; Minors Delay Action on Draft.

By FRANK GETTY. (United Press Sports Editor).

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 6 (U.P.).—Two big major league deals were on the fire tonight, possibly completed, but still unconfirmed. Walter Johnson, the new manager of the Washington Nats, negotiated with the Boston Red Sox for Buddy Myer, the young infielder who formerly was with the Washington Club. Johnson, at latest reports, was to give five players—Pitchers Lisenbee and Gaston, and Infielders Reeves, Cronin and Gillis—in exchange for the Boston third baseman. Myer will play third for the Nats, Johnson said, and Bluege will be shifted to shortstop. Myer was not highly thought of when last with Washington and was traded to Boston for Rigney in the summer of 1927.

Another deal, consummated but not announced, concerned the transfer of a veteran pitcher from Cincinnati to the New York Giants. None could name the pitcher with certainty except Jack Hendricks and John J. McGraw, and they were mute, promising an announcement on Monday Adolfo Luque or Pete Donahue may be the pitcher.

The St. Paul club was trying all afternoon to get Bubbles Hargrave, Cincinnati catcher, as manager, but Jack Hendricks was unable to get the draft question was tabled by the National Association late this afternoon.

The suave diplomacy of John Conway Toole, president of the International League, prevented all friction over the much-discussed "right of selection," when a resolution he introduced was adopted unanimously by the annual meeting.

Discussion of the various amendments to the major-minor agreement concerning the draft question was postponed by the National Association from the various larger minor leagues would meet within 40 days to take up the problem.

A special meeting of the National Association, or at least of representatives of the various classifications, will be necessary next year if the matter of the draft is to be discussed before the 1929 meeting at Chattanooga in December.

The outcome of the draft discussion must be considered a victory for the diplomacy of Toole, since avoidance of the discussion at this time cannot help but strengthen the hand of the class spokesmen when they meet with other committees next month.

The New York Yankees are going in for the main stock system of baseball farms now employed by the St. Louis Cardinals and other major league clubs.

Col Jake Ruppert and Manager Miller Huggins have been busy at Toronto negotiating the smooth transfer of the King Edward Hotel, and the upshot of their conversations is somewhat as follows:

The Yankees will take over control of the Syracuse and Chambersburg, Pa. Clubs, and probably of the Nashville and San Antonio Clubs, which will give them a nice start to place a series of "development" spots across the country, to which young players may be sent for further training without the Yankees losing control of them.

Ty Cobb at Honolulu; No Baseball on Islands. Honolulu, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Ty Cobb, veteran big leaguer, arrived today from a baseball tour of the Far East during which he played with several college teams of Japan. Cobb will not play baseball here because Honolulu sportsmen were unable to arrange games for him.

Injured G. U. Gridmen Lost Chance for Trip. With injuries hampering senior members of the varsity who would be worthy of consideration, Georgetown University will be unable to place men on the All-East Football Team which is to play the All-West combination in San Francisco on December 29. Lou Little, Georgetown athletic director, was asked by Andy Kerr, one of those in charge of forming the All-East Team, if the Billups had any player worthy of a position on the all-star club. Ralph Duplin, quarter back, and Jerry Marroll, captain and guard of the Hora Eleven, are both suffering with broken legs and they most likely would have been considered had they been in good physical condition.

J. C. C. WHIRLWINDS ACTIVE. The J. C. C. Whirlwinds, who won the District title in the 120-pound class last year, are in the field with another strong team. Games are wanted. Call Adams 9798 between 5:30 and 6 o'clock.

BANKERS WOULD PLAY. The American Security & Trust Co. Five has the use of a gymnasium and is anxious to arrange games with unlimited teams. Call Manager Cady at Main 4815 between 9 and 4 o'clock during the day.

HEITZ ELLEN WILLING. The Hertz A. C. Eleven, in the 125-pound class, want a game Sunday. The Brookland Boys Club and Centennial Eleven are challenged. Call Manager Lyons at Lincoln 4432-J. The Hertz recently defeated the Virginia A. C. claimant of the 125-pound championship of northern Virginia.

Speeches at Air Banquet Over Radio

Orville Wright on Program of Speakers Tonight—Callopo, Famous Colored Maid, and Mary Olds Will Be Heard on WRC.

The banquet to recognize delegates attending the International Conference on Civil Aviation will be broadcast through Station WRC at 10:30 o'clock tonight. Among the speakers scheduled are Maj. Lester Gardner, president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce; Orville Wright, and the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, E. P. Warner. The program will last an hour.

A feature new to local listeners will be the Florida Grove's Clearing House Association presentation at 10:05 o'clock this afternoon. Callopo, famous colored maid of the radio, and her mistress, Mary Olds, have long been favorites through WEAF, New York, and are now to be heard through WRC also. A special arrangement for orchestra and the Cavaliers, by Director Rosario Bourdon of Fritz Kreisler's "The Old Rehearsal," will be heard in the City Service program at 8 o'clock tonight. Opening with the well-known musical "Trade-Mark," "Cities Service March," the hour will contain a "Clique on the Radio" by Victor, Fritz's "Legend," "Chanson de Pierrot," by Dr. and selections from Fletcher's suite, "Woodland Pictures."

"A Bunch of Roses," by Chiappi, will be heard as a xylophone solo by Sam Sherman, who will also play a special transcription of Taylor's, "Let Me Call You Sweetheart." The Cavaliers will sing "Old Dog Tray" and two popular numbers.

Buzanne Kenner, coloratura soprano, formerly with the Metropolitan Opera Company, the American Singers, the National Concert Orchestra, directed by Cesare Sodero, and something new in instrumental groups, the "Clique on the Radio," are the features of the National Broadcasting and Concert Bureau Hour at 10 o'clock.

The United States Marine Band Symphony Orchestra, directed by Capt. Taylor Branson, will be heard in an hour's program directed from the Marine Barracks at 4 o'clock.

The last half of the RCA educational hour, directed by Walter Damrosch, will be broadcast from WRC at 11:30 o'clock. Orchestral music, piano, and voice will be featured in the program. The hour will be directed by the composer from a piano piece into orchestral form, opens this period. Handel's "Largo" is really a piece in praise of trees and is taken from his opera, "Xerxes" (1738), where in it is called "Ombra del Fu," or, translating freely, "The Shade of the Past." The prelude to Wagner's "Tristan and Isolde," one of the greatest love stories of all opera, is telling of the love of Isolde, the daughter of King Mark, and her love for the wounded knight, Tristan. It is considered by many to be difficult of performance from the opera itself, but it is a fine introduction to a great work.

Carl von Weber's opera, "Der Schiischute," will be the offering of the United Opera Company at 8 o'clock, and it will be broadcast by WRC and stations of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

A contrast between old-time and up-to-date songs of the same subject will be the regular feature of the "Then and Now Hour" from WRC at 10 o'clock. The Strickland-Buckley singing group, by on the air for an hour at 11 o'clock, offering a diversified collection of dance tunes.

The Radio Household concert and the Brunswick Panopthe concert are early features from WRC.

Bran Hughes and his orchestra will be featured from WRC at 6:30 o'clock this evening followed by the O'Connor Players.

Conduct and Common Sense

DEAR MISS SINGLETON: Maybe this is standing on my dignity too much, but I'm sick of being treated as if I were 16 when I am 25. I know I look about 16, but it seems to me that looks should not make so much difference. Is there any way to make myself look like a grown-up? I don't know. I only look ridiculous. Can you help me?

I don't know whether I can help you or not, but I should think you might turn what you consider a misfortune into an asset if you treated it in the right way. Don't believe I look baby; that's not at all what I mean. Be sensible and dignified in both dress and manner. Be even a little demure. The contrast between your appearance and your capabilities ought to be very piquant, very intriguing.

If you look 16 and yet have the quiet assured manner of an older woman, you should be especially attractive to men. Indeed, I should think they would be quite helpless before the combination of your small physique and your calm maturity. That is, if you have one. As long as you keep the books and business affairs straight, and show them that you can, I imagine they will find you childish face and figure both amusing and appealing, while they respect your ability.

Mark the contrast as much as you can. Don't be pettish, or kittenish, or babyish (which any one might expect, but exhibit an old's head on dimpled shoulders. It ought to be a trump card.
